Memel Reported Surrendering to Reich

Tax Revision Still in Study Stage, Says Roosevelt

Declares Leaders Indorsed Principle That Revenues Should Not Be Reduced

Roosevelt on Taxes

President Roosevelt yesterday disavowed responsibility for any effort to remove tax deterrents, and, incidentally, insisted that the burden of proof rested on Congressional economy advocates to show that business would respond to curtailment of Government expenditures.

So far as tax revision in the interest of business recovery is concerned, he disclosed that he is in a totally receptive mood but now merely is answering questions presented to him as to what various tax proposals will yield.

The whole matter, he said, still is in the study stage—and probably will continue to be for several weeks.

Against Profits Tax Repeal

He disclosed he did not look with favor on a proposal to abandon the 2½ per cent undistributed profits tax.

At the same time, he placed on the doorstep of Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, responsibility for proposing repeal of this as well as certain other taxes, such as the excess profits and capital gains taxes, in an effort to conciliate business.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized Harrison had asked what the effect would be on Treasury revenue of abandonment of these smaller taxes. He declared Harrison had agreed with him that the total amount of revenue to be collected from corporation taxes should not be reduced.

Tax Shifts a Dilemma

Newspapers, he protested, did not publish the fact that Harrison had consented to such a policy, although he said he stated the fact at press conferences twice previously. Newspapermen attending the press conference insisted the fact had been published widely. The Post emphasized that "all were agreed" on such a policy.

The proposal to repeal minor corporation taxes, Mr. Roosevelt said, raises the question whether the lost revenue will be made up bu increasing the regular percentage income tax merely on the big corporations

Dr. Ballou's Son Missing; Father Blames Spring

Washington and Virginia police were asked last night to hunt Robert Ballou, 15, son of Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, who with a companion has been missing from the Fishburne Military Academy at Waynesboro, Va., since Saturday.

Accompanying Ballou was Charles Edward Stuart, 15, of Montross, Va.

Search for the boys centered on Washington when they failed to return for baggage belonging to them and left in a grocery store at Forty-fifth and Macomb streets northwest Monday.

Dr. Ballou said he received word his son was missing Monday. "It's just spring fever, I guess," he said.

Senate Limits Merger Power of President

By Robert C. Albright.

Restricting independent merger action by the President, the Senate yesterday by a 46-to-43 vote wrote the Wheeler amendment into the Administration's Government reorganization bill.

The action plunged the Senate into parliamentary bedlam from which it finally emerged with a motion to reconsider the Wheeler vote still before the Senate. Leaders were rallying forces for an attempt to reverse the count in another test today.

Over Administration arguments that the Wheeler limitation would block any effective Government reorganization, the Senate voted to require affirmative action by both Houses of Congress before any White House merger plan can take effect.

Twenty-three Democrats joined 21 Republicans and two Farmer-Laborites in support of the Wheeler amendment, while 41 Democrats, 1 Independent and 1 Progressive voted "no."

In the rules tangle that followed, Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, beat Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to the floor with a motion to reconsider the vote. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, moved to table the motion.

This maneuver, had it succeeded, would have clinched Senate approval of the Wheeler amendment and blocked any subsequent effort to change it. But it failed by one vote because Senator Borah, Idaho

House Slashes May Furlough 650 in USHA

Bill as Passed Had Phrases Changed to Cut Off $2,500,000

Almost half the 1,306 administrative employes of the United States Housing Authority in the District face the prospect of payless furloughs as a result of quick phrase changes made in the Interior Department appropriations bill which passed the House Monday, it was learned last night.

Although the bill still carries a face appropriation of $4,500,000 for the agency, as recommended by the House committee, approximately $2,500,000 in operating expenses was added by point-of-order changes made under the direction of Representative White (Republican), of Ohio, and the amount of the sum which would be available to USHA for administrative expenses cut actually to $2,000,000. This is half the amount of the appropriation for this year.

Deprived of Rentals

Approximately $1,000,000 in rentals, which formerly compensated USHA for operating costs of 50 PWA housing projects throughout the Nation, would go into the Treasury by the changes. Also $1,500,000 would have to be spent for construction supervisors on new projects—a cost now borne by local communities.

Taking the lead in fighting the act, United Federal Workers of America last night issued a statement declaring the entire housing program might have to be "junked" if the slash should be approved by the Senate.

"Because the bill authorizes a total of $4,500,000, many of the members of the House do not understand that the bill they voted for contains a slash of aproximately 50 per cent of the amount authorized for USHA during the past fiscal year," the U. F. W. A. declared.

$5,500,000 Was Asked

The Budget Bureau, after a study of USHA needs in line with its expanding program, approved a $5,500,000 appropriation for the agency. The economy-minded House Appropriations Committee cut the estimate by $1,000,000.

Without specific legislation stating otherwise, PWA rental returns go to the United States Treasury. It was this provision which was eliminated.

Also deleted was the requirement that USHA be reimbursed from local funds for money spent for construction advisers. Before end of the year a total of 162 new projects now under contract are due to be under construction, as are 25 projects at the present time. Each requires an adviser.

Swift Approval Of Rutledge as Judge Forecast

Sen. King Prefers Local Lawyer for D. C. Appeals Court

Prompt ratification of the nomination of Wiley Blount Rutledge, jr., 44-year-old dean of the University of Iowa Law School, as associate justice of the U. S. Court of Appeals for the District was indicated in Senate circles last night after his appointment by President Roosevelt.

Only Chairman King of the Senate District Committee, a member of the Judiciary Committee, expressed an objection.

"I don't like it," he said. "I would like to see local lawyers who are familiar with the courts here and the problems get these appointments. I don't know anything about Dean Rutledge."

Douglas Hearing Friday

Senator King raised a similar objection to the appointment of Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, of Maryland, to the U. S District Court of the District, but did not try to block his confirmation. His objection to Rutledge, he said, is more pertinent in that he comes from a more distant point.

Public hearings meanwhile have been scheduled for Friday on the nomination of William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, for the United States Supreme Court. Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, chairman of the sub-committee, said that no requests have been made for appearances and that in all probability Douglas will not be asked to testify.

Lauded by Murphy

Dean Rutledge had been mentioned prominently for the Supreme Court vacancy filled by Douglas, and it was believed that his selection for the Court of Appeals was the President's answer to demands of Western Senators for recognition in the high court appointments.

Attorney General Frank Murphy, in recommending Rutledge, called him "a man eminently qualified to serve."

Rutledge, a liberal Democrat, takes one of the new places on the Court of Appeals created by the last Congress.

Born in Cloverport, Ky., he was educated in the University of Wisconsin and the University of Colorado. He married a Michigan girl, Miss Annabel Person, in 1917. They have three children.

After practicing law in Boulder, Colo., he became associate professor of law at the University of Colorado, where he had won his degree. Later he was appointed pro-

Senators Act To Tax Profit Out of War

Bill Carries Names Of Majority; Note To Nazis Repeats 'Wanton' Phrase

By William V. Nessly

A bill to "tax the profits out of war" was assured of Senate passage upon its introduction yesterday, simultaneously with revelation that this country had formally condemned the "wanton lawlessness" followed by Germany in her seizure of Czecho-Slovakia.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, led 50 Senators, more than a majority, and four Representatives in offering the measure calling for steeply graduated levies designed to "discourage war profiteering, distribute the burden of war, keep democracy alive, and for other purposes."

Day's Developments

In addition, the Nation's foreign relations problem was given greater emphasis by these developments:

President Roosevelt, beyond saying he was not happy over the European situation, declined comment, though he did say there was no basis for reports he was suggesting a general economic boycott.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee made plans to meet today to arrange for hearings on the five substitute neutrality bills now before it.

Acting Secretary of State Welles, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, and Brig. Gen. George Marshall, deputy chief of staff of the Army, were called before the committee today to discuss a proposal to supply warships and munitions to Latin-American lands at cost.

The State Department replied to Germany's notification of the "protectorate" steps she had taken in Czecho-Slovakia by saying:

"The Government of the United States has observed that the provinces referred to are now under the de facto administration of the German authorities. The Government of the United States does not recognize that any legal basis exists for the status so indicated."

Nazis "Casual" Toward U. S.

In the note to Dr. Hans Thomsen, Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, Welles called attention to the statement issued by him last Friday, with approval of President Roosevelt, and attached a copy of the statement to give the Berlin regime this Government's bitter reaction to the Czecho-Slovakian developments.

The statement emphasized again "the need for respect for the sanctity of treaties and of the pledged word, and for non-intervention in the domestic affairs of other nations," and declared "it is manifest that acts of wanton lawlessness and of arbitrary force are threatening world peace and the very structure of modern civilization."

The German note consisted almost entirely of the Reich government's decree of March 16. The note said:

"Under Article 6 of this decree, the German Reich takes charge of the foreign affairs of the protector-

Fair and Warmer, Capital Forecast

It will be fair and warmer in Washington today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. A low of 32 degrees is expected early this morning. Southerly winds will bring a rise in temperature later.

Although spring arrived at 7:29 a. m. yesterday, it was jolted by a low of 29 degrees.

Brazil and Chile Reported Seeking Anti-Hitler Front

Buenos Aires, March 21 (AP).—Reports were circulated here tonight that Brazil and Chile were making diplomatic soundings for a possible united front of South American republics to condemn Germany's annexation of Czecho-Slovakia.

In Rio de Janeiro it was said officially only that return of Foreign Minister Aranha from Washington was awaited.

It was apparent, at least, that no South American power was in a hurry to recognize the German protectorate. Argentina had not decided on its attitude.

Anti-Nazi Bloc 'Forerunner To War,' Duce Warns Europe

Reaffirms Complete Adherence to Axis And Approves Czech Seizure

Stop-Hitler Efforts

FRANCE CALLED up additional reserve troops to man the Maginot Line, and decreed a 60-hour week in most industries to speed defense preparations.

SOVIET RUSSIA announced Britain had rejected as "premature" a Soviet proposal for six-power conference on Nazi expansion.

BRITISH EFFORTS to line up France, Russia and Poland in a "Stop Hitler" bloc were hampered by a lack of enthusiasm on the part of Moscow and Warsaw.

Rome Warns of War

By the United Press.

Rome (Wednesday), March 22.—The Fascist grand council said in a communique early today, after a midnight session presided over by Premier Mussolini, that the united front being formed by the so-called democratic bloc and Soviet Russia is "a forerunner of war."

Germany and Italy are prepared to resist the anti-Nazi and anti-Fascist alliance, the grand council said in reaffirming "complete adherence" to the Rome-Berlin axis.

Hitler Seizure Approved

The council gave blanket approval to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's seizure of Czecho-Slovakia, indicating to diplomats that Hitler has sent to Mussolini a pledge of full Nazi support for Italy's "natural association" demands against France.

It was believed that Mussolini would formally proclaim those demands in a speech Sunday, now that he is assured that Germany will stand behind him regardless of possible formation of a united front of the western powers and Soviet Russia.

The week's events in Europe, including Germany's seizure of Czecho-Slovakia, are the inevitable results of the Treaty of Versailles, it was added.

An order of the day asserting that Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini will stand solidly side by side was Italy's answer to speculation that a coolness might have developed in recent days between the two dictators.

War Preparations Pushed

As the Grand Council—hierarchy of fascism—met with Mussolini, speedy preparations for possible war were under way. More military reserves and technicians have been called to the colors, mostly from the classes of 1901, 1902 and 1903. Many have been instructed to report to barracks before midnight Thursday.

Blue antiair-raid lights have been installed along the main thoroughfares of all large Italian cities, including Rome, in preparation for "blackout" drills.

Fascist leaders said the new military measures were necessary because of the war measures being taken in other countries "not espe-

Paris, March 21.—President Albert Lebrun's visit to Great Britain marks an important step in the history of the French-British relations.

DE TESSAN

The first diplomatic effort to overcome old prejudices and to surmount the political difficulties between London and Paris was made almost a century ago. It was, as a matter of fact, in 1843, at the time of the Guizot ministry, that the young Queen Victoria paid a visit to the summer residence of the French royal family at Eu, and inaugurated the series of journeys which, throughout numerous vicissitudes, have finally resulted in a complete understanding between the two countries and unshakable solidarity.

Withstood Test of Fire

Five times on memorable occasions the British sovereigns have crossed the channel. But the most decisive event of contemporary history took place in May, 1903. This was the visit of Edward VII which led to a deep-lying transformation of the French-British relations and to the advent of the "entente cordiale."

The bases of this policy were soon widened and—thanks to improvement of the French-Russian relations—resulted in the formation of the "triple entente." On the eve of the World War—eleven years after the visit of Edward VII—France welcomed George V with a warmth that symbolized the identity of the views of two peoples, which in August, 1914, were to be called upon to take

Proof of the close friendship which now unites the two nations is no longer needed, but evidence of it is always welcome and never more welcome than at a time when violence and perfidy are once more disturbing peaceful conditions on the continent of Europe.

The cordial relations that now happily exist between France and Great Britain afford an important lesson that we should all take to heart in these anxious days. They prove that there is no natural hostility between any two people.

There are probably no two nations that have been at war with one another more often and for longer periods than the French and the British.

Two Incredible Stories

The history of no country is so fascinating as that of France, containing, as it does, two scarcely credible but authentic stories.

One is that of the peasant girl who put on armor, who went from keeping sheep to commanding armies and who in a series of victories drove away the invader from the soil of her native country.

Hardly less wonderful is the story of the penniless lieutenant who in a few years made himself an emperor, who created kingdoms for his brothers, who for nearly 20 years was undefeated in battle and to whom all the

Carol Fears War 'Incident' as 2d German Is Shot; Calls Troops

Bucharest, March 21.—Rumania today called additional reserves to army service as a result of concern over reported concentrations of Bulgarian and Hungarian troops on her borders and the massing of German divisions in Moravia.

The shooting of one German by a Rumanian Jew and the unexplained death by shooting of a German legation secretary here heightened a feeling of uneasiness which the prime minister's office endeavored to dispel.

Police investigated the death of George Schmidz, the German legation secretary, although German quarters insisted he had shot himself. The legation refused to comment.

Earlier at Brasov, 100 miles northwest of Bucharest, Dr. Hjalmar Krarzt, a German tourist, was shot

Swastika Over Memel

By the Associated Press.

Kaunas, Lithuania, March 21.—Victor Gailius, Lithuanian governor of the Memel territory, tonight said Germany had given Lithuania a virtual ultimatum demanding cession of the territory to the Reich, and Lithuania was reported to have decided to yield.

Gailius said Lithuania had been told if disturbances occurred before transfer of the Memel territory, German troops would march in to restore order.

Ultimatum From Ribbentrop

The statement was made after the Lithuanian cabinet, meeting in extraordinary session, reportedly decided to surrender to Germany the former German territory and its 150,000 inhabitants.

Without revealing the government's decision an official communique showed the firmness of the language of German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop when he received Lithuanian Foreign Minister Urbsys on Monday and applied the "self-determination of nations" lever to the Memel question.

The communique said:

"Urbsys, on his return from Berlin, informed the cabinet ministers of the results of his conversation with Ribbentrop. Ribbentrop presented on the Reich's behalf a demand for the return of Memel to Germany, adding that if effected amicably Germany would take into consideration the economic interests of Lithuania in the harbor of Memel.

"This demand was based by Ribbentrop on the principle of self-determination of nations.

"Ribbentrop further intimated that the mood in Memel was such that the question had to be settled rapidly on the basis proposed by Germany to avoid clashes.

Deliberate 5 Hours

"The council of ministers deliberated on the situation created by these demands from 2 p. m. to 7 p. m. Urbsys later gave an account of the situation in a secret meeting of Parliament lasting from 9 p. m. to midnight."

Questioned regarding the Lithuanian garrison in Memel, Gailius said that certain equipment already had been moved, but that orders were being awaited from Kaunas before evacuation of troops took place.

He said Lithuania's answer to the virtual ultimatum would be delivered to Berlin tomorrow.

Previously military circles had denied emphatically that Lithuanian troops already had left the territory, a 1,099 square mile strip detached from East Prussia by the Treaty of Versailles and later placed under Lithuanian rule.

Informed sources said arrangements had been made between Lithuania and Germany for Lithuania to

Honolulu, T. H., March 21
LOINCLOTH PARADISE

When Senator Tom Connally was in the Territory of Hawaii to examine its application for American Statehood he was quizzing a young Japanese - Hawaiian school teacher about his religion. The Senator seemed to lump Shintoism with Buddhism.

"I would be happier," retorted the young fellow, "to get a rifle and fight for Old Glory than to try to answer your questions about religion."

Jinx Falkenberg
. . . lovely

* * * *

Yesterday we flew from Honolulu to the Island of Hawaii, 200 miles away, to see the volcano from the air. Just after the take-off we got a surprising view of the inside of the round, shallow crater atop Diamond Head, the tall promontory which juts into the Pacific at the eastern end of Waikiki Beach. This tall crag resembles Gibraltar and here some of the Army's big guns are mounted.

* * * *

These fortifications are veiled in secrecy, and few civilians have been allowed to visit the crater. Before planes take off from Honolulu's airport, all cameras are taken from passengers, and it is "kapu," or forbidden, to take any pictures above the Island of Oahu, on which Honolulu is situated.

"—cannon command every beach"

The Army's network of paved roads is designed to enable its troops and its big guns to race to any corner of the Island of Oahu within one hour. They say the big guns around Honolulu could command the most vulnerable shoreline off Haleiwa 20 miles away; that, in fact, every big gun could bombard a landing party menacing any corner of Oahu.

* * * *

But right now Hawaii's immediate destiny is not in the care of the big guns. It is in the hands of two disturbingly lovely California girls, Jinx Falkenberg and Patsy Mace, who have been brought out here to pose for photographs to show how much fun Americans can have in these American islands. You will see a lot of their pictures next winter.

* * * *

This morning, Col. Steichen, the photographic genius, waded out into the surf with his pants on and camera in hand to photograph them in an outrigger canoe off the sands of Waikiki Beach. He wore his gray straw hat and fought the waves and spray courageously, while the girls merely looked lovely to entice you to Hawaii.

"—with his pants on in the surf"

Here in the Islands, where there are so many Japanese jujitsu experts and so many American Army and Navy boxers and wrestlers, the Americans are convinced that a good boxer or wrestler can flatten a jujitsu expert before he has time to begin to jitsu. And they say that if you take off your coat and shirt the jujitsu man is flabbergasted because so many of his holds depend on grabbing your clothes.

Rabbi Wise Thanks Roosevelt for Aiding Refugees

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, told President Roosevelt yesterday that Jews the world over appreciated his "fine understanding and concern and deep sympathy" in connection with efforts to aid Jewish refugees.

The Jewish leader had just returned from London where he attended the conference on Palestine for the Zionist Organization of America.

Rabb Wise was accompanied to the White House by his successor as head of the Zionist organization, Dr. Solomon Goldman, who said:

"There is already in Palestine, with a Jewish population of nearly half a million, a de facto Jewish homeland. The ultimate decision as to the future of the Jewish homeland in Palestine will be made, not by the British government, but by the Jewish people in Palestine and their Jewish supporters and Christian friends throughout the world."

Cotton Industry Minimum Pay Of 32½c. Voted

More Than 120,000 Would Get Raises in Wage-Hour Ruling

By the United Press.

A Federal wage-hour industry committee last night recommended immediate pay raises for more than 120,000 workers in the cotton textile industry.

By a vote of 13 to 6, the textile industry committee asked wage-hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews to fix a national minimum wage of 32½ cents per hour for the entire textile industry, which employs 600,000 persons.

Donald M. Nelson, of Chicago, the committee chairman, estimated such a national minimum would mean a wage increase for over one-sixth of the industry's employes.

35 Cents for Wool

A woolen industry committee, which was established as an adjunct of the textile committee because the two industries overlap, already has recommended a 36 cents per hour minimum for more than 150,000 employes.

The wage hour administrator had no comment as the textile committee acted, but the law requires him to hold a public hearing before promulgating a minimum wage or rejecting a committee's recommendations. Andrews' aides said that the hearing on both of these recommendations would be held simultaneously.

No differential was made in favor of the South although under the NRA code the cotton textile industry minima wages were 32½ cents per hour in the North and 30 cents in the South.

Applies to Other Fabrics

"Although classifications are allowed under the fair labor standards act if based on competitive conditions as affected by transportation, living and production costs, and on certain other bases, this committee, after an exhaustive study of these factors, decided in favor of an industry-wide minimum," Chairman Donald M. Nelson reported to Andrews.

The recommendation applies to cotton, silk, rayon and other synthetic yarns or fabrics.

Nelson said that his committee heard 1,000 pages of testimony from 60 witnesses, and received a Bureau of Labor Statistics study before making its recommendations.

12,000-Mile Naval Flying Boat May Go 360- M. P. H.

San Diego, Calif., March 21 (AP). A huge flying boat of 2,000 horsepower secretely developed for the United States Navy is within 60 days of completion at the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation plant here.

Informed sources described a craft expected to eclipse in performance any flying boat, light or heavy, in existence.

The twin-engined monoplane may be able to reach 360 m. p. h. Its designed range would make it capable on nonstop flights of almost 12,000 miles.

Smaller than the new Boeing Clippers, the consolidated craft will measure about 140 feet across its single wing and 75 feet from nose to tail. It will weigh, however, almost as much as four-engined seaplanes now in use.

Bill Would Extend Bank Chiefs' Loans

By the Associated Press.

Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, introduced yesterday a bill which would extend the time in which executive officers of Federal Reserve member banks must pay off any money they have borrowed from their institutions.

A law passed several years ago prohibited such loans after June 16, 1938, and directed loans made prior to that date must be paid off by June 16, 1939. The Glass measure would specify no time limit. It places discretion in the boards of directors.

Dewey Popularity for 1940 Up Sharply Since Hines Trial in Survey of G. O. P. Voters

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 21.—The popularity of Thomas E. Dewey as a Presidential candidate for 1940 has increased sharply among Republican voters all over the country since his successful prosecution last month of James J. Hines, New York Tammany leader who was convicted on racket charges.

GALLUP

Surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion taken just before the second Hines trial ended and again several weeks after, show that Dewey's popularity among Republicans with definite opinions on 1940 has nearly doubled since mid-February. The young New York district attorney, who missed the governorship of the State by less than 1 per cent of the popular vote last fall, is today preferred by three times as many voters as his nearest rival, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg.

The Institute's soundings were taken among a representative cross-section of Republican voters throughout the country. They were asked:

Whom would you like to see as the Republican candidate for President in 1940?"

No selected list of candidates was presented. The replies were entirely spontaneous.

Approximately one-half (54 per cent) said they had not made up their minds on any candidate at the present time. The leading seven choices of the remaining voters are shown in the following table, with the trend since the last survey:

THIS MONTH
1. Dewey	50%
2. Vandenberg	15
3. Taft	13
4. Hoover	5
5. Landon	4
6. Lodge	2
7. Borah	2

LAST MONTH (Before Hines Trial)
1. Dewey	27%
2. Vandenberg	21
3. Taft	16
4. Landon	7
5. Borah	4
6. Hoover	4
7. LaGuardia	4

While many political leaders throughout the country praised Dewey's work in convicting Hines, today's survey is the first measurement of its effect on the district attorney's political popularity.

It remains to be seen whether his sharp gains of the last month represent a fundamental shift of sentiment to the Dewey banner, or merely a temporary fillip resulting from the publicity of the Hines trial. While the survey results clearly indicate the popularity of the young racket-buster at this time, the G. O. P. nominating convention is still 15 months away and half of the rank and file of Republican voters have not yet made up their minds.

A comparison of the two Institute surveys shows that there has been little decrease in the "no opinion" vote, the percentage of persons saying they have no definite choice being about the same today as a month ago. Much of Dewey's increase in popularity has come at the expense of minor prospective candidates. In the survey, last month, for example, 17 per cent of the total vote was scattered among a large group of candidates who received only a handful of votes apiece. In the latest survey this scattered vote was cut to less than 9 per cent. Dewey has also drawn some votes from previous supporters of Vandenberg and Taft.

His rise in popularity has come rather evenly throughout the country. He leads the list in all sections at the present time, though his proportionate vote is lower in the East Central section than elsewhere. This area includes Michigan, the home of Senator Vandenberg, and Ohio, the home of Senator Taft.

In addition to the seven leading choices in today's surveys, many other Republican leaders were mentioned by G. O. P. voters, including:

Frank Knox, former Vice Presidential candidate; Senator Hiram Johnson, of California; Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota; Gov. George Aiken, of Vermont; Congressman Bruce Barton, of New York; Gov. Arthur H. James, of Pennsylvania; Gov. Leverett Saltonstall, of Massachusetts; Gov. John W. Bricker, of Ohio; Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York; Theodore Roosevelt, jr., Publisher Frank Gannett and Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas.

Next Sunday the Institute will report the results of a survey among Democratic voters which will show the leading choices for Democratic candidate for 1940.

On Capitol Hill

Representative Darden Opposes 4-Power Conference to Halt Nazi Aggression

Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, expressed his opposition yesterday to any joint conference of the United States, Great Britain, France and Russia "for the purpose of halting Nazi aggression."

DARDEN

"I am bitterly opposed to what has happened in Europe," he said. "I believe that Hitler has brought us again to the verge of world war in what appears to be his ambition to make himself master of Europe.

"On the other hand it is idle to join in any conference unless we are prepared to back it up by force. I would not be willing to support any move that would look to the use of American troops in Europe, and for that reason I think consultation would be an idle gesture."

The Senate Labor Committee approved a bill to set up a new Federal-aid education program from which $75,000,000 of Federal funds would be spent during the first year. The amount would be increased to $208,000,000 annually after five years.

The second bill in two days providing for deportation of aliens who fail to become naturalized citizens within a specified time was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative McLead (Republican), of Michigan.

The bill would require fingerprinting and annual registration for aliens between 18 and 60, and would also require aliens to become naturalized within six years after entry into this country.

On Monday, Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, introduced an omnibus bill containing a provision that aliens be deported if they fail to become naturalized within five years.

John Thomas Taylor, legislative representative for the American Legion, appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee, recommended classification of the legion as a fraternal group and that it be exempted from payment of Federal unemployment insurance taxes on employes. He also urged liberalization of widows' and orphans' benefits under the Social Security Act.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins advised a Senate immigration subcommittee that imposition of quotas on nations of the Western Hemisphere would result in ill-feeling toward the United States.

Her opinion, read into the record by Edward J. Shaughnessy, of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, was offered during hearings on five bills by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, one of which calls for quotas on Canada, Newfoundland, Mexico, Cuba, Haiti, the Canal Zone, Dominican Republic and South American countries.

John B. Trevor, of the American coalition of patriotic societies, told the group that stricter immigration laws are needed until the unemployment problem is solved.

Reps. McReynolds, Mansfield Better

Conditions of Representative Mansfield, of Texas, suffering an intestinal disorder, and Representative McReynolds, of Tennessee, suffering a bronchitis relapse, were reported "very satisfactory" yesterday at Naval Hospital.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, recovering from an attack of grippe, and Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, convalescing after an operation, were continuing to show improvement.

Leaders Fail To Repair Party Split on Relief

Parley Fruitless; 100 Million Seen as Sub-Committee Figure

In a determined effort to avoid a split in Democratic ranks, Speaker Bankhead, Majority Leader Rayburn and Democratic members of the House Appropriations Committee vainly attempted in a conference yesterday to reach agreement on the sum to be voted the WPA for the remaining three months of the fiscal year.

With advocates of a slash in relief funds pitted against those desiring to grant the full $150,000,000 recommended by the President, the conferees failed to decide on any figure. However, it was thought most likely yesterday that when the Appropriations sub-committee handling relief votes tomorrow or Friday, $100,000,000 will be the sum recommended.

At yesterday morning's conference, which was held behind closed doors just before renewed sub-committee hearings on the bill, it was reported that something of a bargaining match took place, with almost every figure between $100,000,000 and $150,000,000 mentioned.

Leaders to Agree on Cut

Administration leaders, it was said, indicated they would agree on $125,000,000, or a 16 per cent cut in the President's figures; but it is understood that six of the eight Democratic members of the sub-committee gave evidence of an intention to hold out for $100,000,000. The four Republican members of the sub-committee are almost certain to vote for the smaller of the two proposals.

It is expected that if the sub-committee defies the party leadership and recommends $100,000,000, heavy pressure will be put upon the full committee to raise the figure to something near $150,000,000. However, a partial and informal poll of the full committee yesterday indicated that a majority of the 39 members would probably sustain a $100,000,000 recommendation.

In addition to the six "economy" members of the sub-committee, the full committee includes at least three other "economy" Democrats and 15 Republicans, nearly all of whom will try to pare down the relief bill.

However, once the relief bill is subjected to the invisible pressure of a roll-call vote on the floor of the House, it is considered probable by many observers that the total will go back to $150,000,000.

Accusing the Republicans of talking economy and voting to spend, Democrats point to the difference between the Republican teller and roll-call votes on a recent proposal to limit the family unit costs of United States Housing Authority buildings to $3,500. On a teller vote, 107 of the 110 Republicans on the floor favored the limitation, while on a roll-call a day or two later, only 77 Republicans voted for it.

Harrington Appears

Although the subcommittee and the full committee are expected to vote on the bill this week, House action is not likely until early next week—prabaly Monday or Tuesday. Meanwhile, a resolution sponsored by Representative Cox (Democrat), Georgia directing the Appropriation Committee to investigate the WPA, will be considered by the Rules Committee today.

Col. Harrington, WPA Adminstrator, appeared at both morning and afternoon hearings of the relief subcommittee yesterday. While the subcommittee was in session, a group of Southern Congressmen heard delegates to an All-Southern Washington conference of the Workers Alliance state that the $150,000,000 appropriation was a rock-bottom minimum."

Qualified observers said yesterday that if the $150,000,000 relief bill does pass the House, it will have little difficulty in the Senate.

Half-Million in Unbudgeted Farm Payments Sought by House Bloc for '90% of Parity'

A House farm bloc drive to write $500,000,000 for unbudgeted parity price payments into the Agriculture appropriation bill yesterday was rallying Southern and Western support for a showdown in the House next week.

The $500,000,000 figure was disclosed yesterday by Representative Phil Ferguson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who denied authorship of the plan. He said he has been conferring with Representative Jones (Democrat), of Texas, on possible House Agriculture Committee support.

The parity price drive will await a report from the House Appropriations Committee late this week on the 1940 agriculture appropriation bill, said already to have been increased in sub-committee some $244,000,000 above the budget to a total of $1,060,000,000 for all farm purposes.

Unless the sub-committee reconsiders recent action, or is overridden by the full Appropriations Committee, this bill, as reported, will carry $250,000,000 for farm parity price payments not recommended by the President or included in his budget.

Ferguson said the plan is to attempt to raise this amount another $250,000,000 to a total of $500,000,000 for the parity payments. If provision for parity payments is eliminated by the Appropriations Committee, he said an amendment will be offered on the floor to provide $500,000,000.

Congress last year voted $212,000,000 for the special price benefits, and these payments are being made for the current year. The President recently chided Congress for its failure to live up to an implied promise to provide revenues to finance the payments.

Ferguson estimated the $212,000,000 being currently paid assures farmers of approximately 65 per cent of price parity on their produce. The House Appropriation Sub-committee provision, of $250,000,000, he said, would provide only 75 per cent of parity, while 90 per cent of parity would be assured under the $500,000,000 proposal.

$1,000,000,000 Held Needed

He said Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is authority for the statement that $1,000,000,000 would be necessary to provide 100 per cent of parity. Payments would be provided in addition to another $500,000,000 for regular soil conservation benefits. Commodities included are cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco and rice.

The direction of the Administration's farm program meanwhile hung in the balance, as rival methods for relieving the 11,500,000 loan cotton surplus were studied. Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, seeks special subsidies for cotton growers in return for agreements not to seek further loans. The Smith bill, now awaiting Senate consideration, also enables farmers to buy back their loan cotton at 3 cents a pound, in lieu of not planting a similar amount.

The President last week hit at the Smith bill as too costly, and the AAA now is exploring possibilities of an export subsidy on cotton as an alternative. Dealing an indirect blow at the export subsidy alternative, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, has before the Senate a resolution to forbid any sales of cotton below cost.

Air Authority Eases Rules for Private Fliers

Changes in Renewal of Licenses Revealed at Aeronautic Meeting

Relaxation of requirements for renewal of private pilots' licenses to remove "undue hardships" imposed on noncommercial flyers, was announced last night by Chairman Edward J. Noble, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

In the future, he declared at the annual Loening Intercollegiate Flying Award banquet at the Shoreham Hotel, "the aplicant must show a total of 15 hours' solo time, with at least 5 hours in each type (of plane) for which renewal is sought, or, instead of the 15 hours' solo time, he can qualify for renewal by obtaining from a certified instructor within 45 days of the expiration of his license, one hour's dual instruction, three hours' solo practice and one hour's check flying with the instructor in the plane . . ."

Formerly applicants were required to complete 15 hours' solo time in each "weight of plane and type of engine classification" in which renewal of the license was sought.

To Simplify Requirements

The change was made, Noble said, "in accordance with the announced purpose of simplifying all requirements . . . where this can be done without sacrifice of basic safety principles . . ."

Col. Robert Olds, commander of the flight of six flying fortresses to Buenos Aires last year, said that an increase in the number of pilots as planned by the Civil Aeronautics training program will "greatly aid civil aeronautics and the national defense."

Emphasizing that the Army is equipped to provide fliers with the basic training necessary to make pilots, he remarked "nothing beats experience, and there is nothing more valuable than actual flying to anyone interested in any form of aerodynamics.

Aeronautical enginers who are competent pilots themselves," he added, "can turn out more satisfactory planes for the consumer, be he a military man or a civilian."

Helicopter Plans Revealed

Grover Loening, donor of the Loening Trophy, awarded each year to the outstanding collegiate flying club, predicted that the helicopter would be the next type of plane to be highly developed and widely distributed, and announced formation of a company to construct such aircraft.

Robert Hinckley, member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, announced he would give $500 to be awarded within the next 12 months for the best essay or essays on the subject, "The Cultural Value of Flying." The judges and the division of the fund, he explained, would be determined jointly by the Intercollegiate Flying Association and the National Aeronautic Association.

Others attending the function were Charles F. Horner, president of the National Aeronautic Association; Charles S. Guthrie, general counsel of the Civic Aeronautics Authority, and Mrs. Dorothy Kirkpatrick, president of the Ninety-Nine Club.

The Loening Trophy was retained by Stanford University's flying club, which had 900 flying hours to its credit. Second place was granted the University of Michigan, and third went to the University of Minnesota. Clark Henderson presided.

The Washington winners were among 1,300 announced yesterday. Americans drew 26 of the 50 residual prizes, worth $4,210 each, but none was in this vicinity.

Of the 400 consolation prizes, 223 went to residents of the United States. All told, Americans hold tickets to win at least $2,699,286 on the "sweeps," though the big winners will not be announced until after the race is run at Aintree Friday.

Sale of the sweepstakes tickets at $2.50 each brought in $12,141,735, according to Associated Press dispatches from Dublin. After deductions for expenses, taxes, ticket sellers' prizes and $2,232,280 for the hospital trust, $6,710,500 was left for individual prizes.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Leopold Stokowski conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday night. Program: Toccata and Fugue in D minor (Bach), Variations on a Theme of Haydn (Brahms), "Feuerzauber" (Wagner), Symphony No. 5, Op. 47 (Shostakovich).

Leopold Stokowski's sole appearance in Washington this season as conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra was the occasion for rejoicing in Constitution Hall last evening, when a large and clamorous audience welcomed him and recalled him so insistently at the close of the concert that he made a brief speech of acknowledgment and added an extra number to the program. The Philadelphians, as well as their distinguished leader, had cause to consider their last visit of the season to the National Capital a notable one.

The triumphant concert was not without a few flaws in the auspices. For one thing, the drone of the ventilating motor became so audible as to disturb Stokowski before he began the Brahms variations, and he dispatched the second violoncellist back stage with a message for silence. Then a troublesome draft, which swept across the stage with sufficient force to flip over music pages on the stands of the first violins, had to be attended to before the "Feuerzauber" started. After that, nothing outward occurred.

Stokowski placed first on his program his own transcription of Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor, one of the most massive and dramatic works for organ. This version for orchestra is now 13 years old, and has become very well known for its brilliant scoring. In fact, its scintillance and its kaleidoscopic coloring transform the Gothic lines of the composition into a pleasure dome of Kubla Khan, dazzling with a more than Oriental splendor. To adapt a familiar adage: it is magnificent but it is not Bach.

This architectural marvel was followed by the delightful set of variations which Brahms wove about the "Chorale St. Antoni" that he borrowed from a divertimento by Haydn. At the bequest of Stokowski's eloquent hands, the orchestra displayed the ingenious embroideries with an impeccable skill in phrasing and an admirable facility in dynamic nuances. The performance was continuously flexible and supple in movement.

Stokowski's predisposition for arrangements again came to the fore in his version of the "Feuerzauber" from "Die Walkuere," which starts with Bruennhilde's lines, "Auf dein Gebot entbrenne ein Feuer," and continues to the close of the act, with the vocal parts assigned to instruments. The score is richly rewarding in its symphonic dress and preferable to a stage performance of the scene when the singers were inadequate for their heroic task.

The latter half of the program was devoted to the first performance here of Dmitri Shostakovich's fifth symphony which dates from 1937 and is reputed to have been written in celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the U. S. S. R. Be that as it may, there are certainly no obvious political implications in the music, which is stamped not with social propaganda but with the individuality of the composer. If there are any communistic doctrines lurking in the score, they are not to be detected by the most observant listener.

Since his first symphony, which was his Opus 10, Shostakovich has made definite advance in his mastery of orchestral technique. His defiant, almost impudent, disregard for convention has been gradually modified into a comparative compliance with the rules of the game. Beginning with a refusal to have anything to do with "development" of themes in the classical sense, he has by this time realized the importance of that intellectual process.

In the fifth symphony he calls his development section in the first movement "melodic exfoliation," which is nothing more than a new name for an old procedure. The second movement is in "the historical scherzo form" and the last movement is admitted to be "in rondo form." These concessions to tradition are indications of a sound growth in musical stature. In the third movement there are unmistakable evidences of a return to the romantic style, which was, after all, a vitally significant phase of musical history.

$10 Bond Posted By Goldsborough For Trial Today

AFL to Study Jurisdiction Of CIO Unions

Decision Is Expected To Bear Strongly on Peace Negotiations

The executive council of the American Federal of Labor will attempt to decide, at a meeting this afternoon, whether to recognize expansion into new fields by unions of the Congress of Industrial Organizations which pulled out of the A. F. L.

The decision will have an important bearing on the outcome of the new peace negotiations undertaken at the request of President Roosevelt.

In taking up the question of jurisdiction, however, the A. F. L., some observers pointed out, is tackling the most difficult phase of the whole problem. Persons anxious to see some progress made toward unity were frankly skeptical.

Meanwhile, the Senate Labor Committee, in order to give the rival labor organizations more time in which to work for an agreement, postponed until next Tuesday a decision on a date for hearings on amendments to the Wagner labor relations act.

The A. F. L. and C. I. O. peace committees will resume meetings at the Labor Department here Friday.

The question before the A. F. L. executive council is whether, if the C. I. O. unions should return to the fold, they will come back merely by restoration of their old charters. This would mean, of course, that their invasion of new labor fields would not be recognized.

Conflicts between certain A. F. of L. and C. I. O. unions enter into the question. It is recalled that similar conflicts have existed for many years between some of the A. F. of L. unions. In view of the inability of the A. F. of L. unions to sttle their controversies among themselves, it is believed adjustments between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. unions are a remote prospect.

3 Committees Push Action on Arms Program

War Material Reserve Voted; $150,000,000 Bill to Floor Today

Three House committees yesterday indorsed different phases of the Administration's armament program.

Acquisition of a $100,000,000 war reserve of strategic raw materials was voted by the House Military Affairs Committee after a measure under consideration for several weeks was redrafted to conform with President Roosevelt's desires.

Instead of providing for expenditure of $25,000,000 a year for four years, the bill will leave to the War Department the amount of annual outlay. The Administration has indicated that $10,000,000 will be spent next year.

A House appropriation sub-committee finished consideration of the second deficiency bill carrying in excess of $150,000,000 for national defense. The measure, providing $110,000,000 for new weapons and other Army equipment, $6,500,000 for seacoast defenses, $36,000,000 for naval shipbuilding and $6,500,000 for development of aircraft research facilities, will be reported to the House today, with passage expected before night.

The House Naval Affairs Committee approved a bill authorizing a $6,500,000 naval supply base at Oakland, Calif.

Carrier Bids Due Today

Downtown, the Navy Department announced that bids will be opened at noon today on a 20,000-ton aircraft carrier, last vessel in the current year's building program.

The Department also revealed that the cruiser Trenton will relieve the Omaha as flagship of the temporary European squadron which has been operating in the Mediterranean Sea. She will sail from Norfolk June 3, to enable the Omaha to return for overhaul and service with the fleet.

At a session of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress here, Gov. Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico urged improvement of San Juan and Pajardo harbors in the Caribbean possession as essential to defense for the Panama Canal and entire Gulf of Mexico area. The Governor, a retired major general, declared the project also would aid commercial relations with South America.

Final action on the $358,000,000 Army air expansion bill was delayed by the prolonged fight in the Senate over the reorganization bill. Submission of a supplemental report on naval air bases, dealing with the location of a major air station in the Southeast, has postponed until next week Senate committee action on the naval phase of the emergency defense program.

Two Measures Up Today

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said the group will hold a hearing on the Southeastern project Monday and hoped to report out the air base bill shortly thereafter. While no vote has been taken on the controversial point of developing the Pacific Island of Guam he said he expected the committee would eliminate it from the bill.

Two House committees will take up defense measures today. The Naval Committee will consider the Navy supplemental air base report, while the Judiciary Committee will hold a hearing on an administration bill to safeguard oil reserves in tidal Pacific land.

Britain Chary Of Soviet Plan, Russia Reveals

Says London Called Bid for 6-Power Parley 'Premature'

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 21.—Soviet Russia today announced it had proposed that Great Britain and other nations alarmed by German expansion should "clarify" their positions in a six-power conference, but that Britain had characterized the idea as "premature."

A communique said the Soviet suggestion was made in reply to a British inquiry as to the Soviet position in the event of aggression against Rumania. The proposal had urged a conference among Britain, France, Rumania, Poland, Turkey and the Soviet Union.

The statement made a point of asserting that neither Rumania nor Poland had asked Moscow directly for aid and that only Britain had suggested Rumania was endangered.

Stalin's Speech Recalled

In diplomatic circles, where the communique aroused lively comment, it was recalled that Josef Stalin declared before the All Union Communist Party Congress on March 10 that Soviet enemies were attempting to "poison the atmosphere" between Berlin and Moscow and that Soviet leaders must not allow the nation to be used to pull another country's chestnuts from the fire.

The communique, to some observers, seemed to declare: "If Rumania and Poland want us to help them defend territories they took from us some 20 years ago, they will have to come out and say so."

(Rumanian troops seized Bessarabia in 1918. Poland took a large slice of the Ukraine in 1920.)

Two-Way Pronouncement

Others interpreted the communique as a two-way pronouncement—an assurance to Berlin that Moscow has not been going out of its way to pick a quarrel by offering help to Rumania and Poland before any help was asked, and an assurance to the western democracies that Soviet Russia always is willing to participate in an international effort to clarify situations threatening to disturb European peace.

At the same time it reaffirmed Moscow's recently expressed determination to pursue an independent foreign policy.

Madrid Reported Asking Franco to Let Leftists Flee

Paris, March 21 (AP).—Spanish republican sources said tonight the Madrid national defense council had asked nationalist Gen. Franco to permit evacuation of several hundred leftist leaders as its only condition to an immediate surrender.

Most of those on the list were said to be trade union leaders, with a few military leaders who feared a brief trial and a firing squad.

Franco, these sources said, so far has refused to arrange for any sort of safe passage for these leaders.

Nationalist sources said that if Gen. Franco chose he could "walk into Madrid almost without a shot."

by a Jew and was said to be in a serious condition.

[There were reports of a clash between Hungarian and Rumanian troops on the Transylvanian frontier, the United Press said. It was rumored that three Rumanian officers were killed, but details were lacking.

[Rumania already has approximately 200,000 troops at her borders, under a state of emergency. Fear of war rose rapidly, and there was widespread hoarding of food. Many persons withdrew bank deposits.—Editor's note.]

Some sources feared the shootings of the two Germans might become an international "incident" in view of King Carol's stand against German trade or political domination of Rumania.

A war department order for additional troops of the Second Army Corps to report for active service indicated they would be sent to the southern frontier.

The order was issued after reports reached Bucharest that concentrations of Bulgarian and Hungarian troops on the southern, western and northwestern frontiers continued.

Four Army Corps on Duty

Although government circles stated Rumania was not especially worried about what was happening on her borders, they were concerned by reports, which could not be confirmed here, that 42 German divisions were being assembled in Moravia.

It was emphasized Rumania had not ordered a general mobilization.

But portions of four of Rumania's seven army corps were now in active service, in addition to the regular army.

The precautionary measures were taken as trade talks between Germany and Rumania were halted and it was announced that Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, of the German economics ministry, was leaving tomorrow or next day to obtain fresh instructions in Berlin.

[It could not be ascertained whether the suspension of the negotiations meant that the signature of a pact was being postponed for further adjustments or whether the trade deal was definitely canceled, International News Service said.—Editor's note.]

The call to service of the Second Army Corps emphasized there was need for artillerymen and engineers and that the entire corps was not being mobilized.

Classes were dismissed in many Rumanian schools, which were to be used as barracks for the reservists. Officers and men were ordered to remain in readiness at their posts.

Fear German Arm

Officials expressed confidence the country had nothing to fear either from Hungary or Bulgaria, or from both operating together, but there was fear of what the German troops assembled in Moravia might mean.

(The Bucharest reports were the first intimation that Bulgaria also might be taking measures to strengthen her frontier. Ranged with Germany and Austria-Hungary in the World War, she lost territory to both Rumania and Yugoslavia, and, like Hungary, has entertained hopes of ultimate revision of her frontiers.

(In Budapest, foreign observers estimated 500,000 Hungarians were under arms, with at least half of them ranged along Rumania's western border, and especially in Carpatho-Ukraine, the territory annexed from Czecho-Slovakia. Since Czecho-Slovakia and Rumania were allies in the Little Entente the Rumanian-Carpatho-Ukraine border northwest of Bucharest was not fortified.

(German troops, reported massed in Moravia, would first have to march through Slovakia or Hungary to reach the Rumanian border.)

[Four German columns were reported yesterday to be marching across Slovakia.—Editor's note.]

As a reassurance to Rumania's neighbors, the prime minister's office issued a statement which said:

"No military campaign is contemplated. The troops being called to service will be stationed far back from the frontier and will participate in practice exercises. These measures will be rescinded when it is definitely established that certain of our neighbors who have mobilized their forces have recalled their troops."

Rumanian Firm

That Rumania intends to keep her present frontiers, despite Bulgaria's known desire for the return of the 9,000 square miles of Dobruja and Hungary's desires for restoration of the 24,000 square miles of Transylvania, was made evident by a government spokesman.

Rumania will defend every inch of her territory and regards the present frontiers as final, he said.

The halt in the German-Rumanian trade talks was preceded by official intimations that the new treaty would increase trade with Germany, but would grant her no monopolistic privileges. Instead, it was said Rumania intended to adhere to a free commercial policy.

This turn came after Great Britain on Monday announced a commercial mission would be sent to counter German efforts here.

The spotlight was turned on the German-Rumanian trade negotiations when a Rumanian legation spokesman in London Saturday said Germany had offered to guarantee Rumania's frontiers and independence if she received a monopoly in certain Rumanian exports. Germany is interested especially in oil and wheat.

Budapest, March 21 (AP).—Hungary advanced precautionary measures on the former Ruthenian-Rumanian frontier today, calling 200,000 additional reservists to the colors.

Foreign military observers estimated the number under arms at 500,000, with at least half of them on or near the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier. Especially strong units were believed to be in the unfortified section which until last week was the border between Rumania and Carpatho-Ukraine. The additional men would bring Hungary's armed strength to 700,000.

Thousands of Hungarian families began moving from the border regions as new troops moved in.

Hungarian army officers said that if it should become necessary to "defend the fatherland," the Hungarian army would be fully capable of recovering Transylvania from Rumania. Transylvania has 1,200,000 Hungarian inhabitants who might be expected to help Hungary in case of conflict.

Navy Hits Cost Of Displaying Old Warships Here

Plans to bring five historic naval vessels here as "floating museums" met a setback yesterday, when the Navy Department and the Budget Bureau objected to the cost.

The move to berth ships famous in American naval history in the Potomac was understood to have had President Roosevelt's backing.

However, in a letter to the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday, the Navy said restoration of the ships would cost $2,500,000, that a basin would have to be constructed to berth them and that other expenditures would be needed for approaches and annual upkeep.

receive a guarantee of the German-Lithuanian frontier and certain facilities for the use of the Memel port, which is Lithuanian's only outlet to the sea, in return for surrendor of the territory.

It was reported here, without confirmation, that an entire German army corps had been moved to East Prussia in the last few days.

The special cabinet meeting followed an announcement by Dr. Ernst Neumann, Nazi leader in Memel, that he expected "Lithuania to surrender the Memel territory in the near future."

Widespread reports said Saturday was the time limit for the return of the former German territory, but the reports could not be confirmed.

Informed sources said Von Ribbentrop, in his conference with Urbsys, had asked that arrangements for transfer of territory be made within five days.

Saturday is the date set for the first meeting of the Memel Diet since the Nazis won an overwhelming majority of the Diet seats last December.

It has been reliably reported for some days that the Diet at least would vote Dr. Neumann plenary powers and adjourn sine die, leaving him in the position of virtual dictator.

Dr. Neumann said today that continued association of Lithuania and Memel is "economically and culturally impossible."

Memel Jews and non-Germans were excited by reports of imminent union of Memel with the Reich. An exodus of Jews already has started, and Lithuanian officials were reliably reported to be moving their families out of Memel.

The Memel railway station was besieged by crowds. Telephone communication was so heavy that it was almost impossible to get a call through from Kaunas to Memel.

Cairo, March 21 (AP).—The Italian Minister to Egypt was called home today to report on the Egyptian situation following a minor border incident.

The Egyptian government was said to have called the minister's attention to a party of Italian troops crossing the frontier recently. Although England did not protest the incident, the minister was understood to be preparing to leave for Rome tomorrow.

Einstein Likens War on Jewry To Barbarism

New York, March 21 (AP).—Albert Einstein said tonight the "war" against Jews in central Europe threatened a "reversion to the barbarism of ages long past."

In a speech in behalf of the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees and Overseas Needs, prepared for country-wide broadcast, the scientist asserted the aim of the anti-Jewish movement "is to exterminate not only ourselves but to destroy together with us that spirit expressed in the Bible the Christianity which made possible the rise of civilization in central and northern Europe."

"If this aim is achieved," he added, "Europe will become a barren waste. For human community life cannot long endure on a basis of crude force, brutality, terror and hate.''

Hacha Heads Nazi Committee To Rule Czech Protectorate

By the Associated Press.

Prague, March 21.—The Parliament of the vanished Czecho-Slovak republic was dissolved tonight and a new totalitarian state structure was formed to fit Bohemia and Moravia as a Nazi protectorate.

Emil Hacha, last President of the republic, dissolved the Parliament. An official report of his action said nothing about the constitution. Presumably it has died a natural death.

Bohemia and Moravia are to be ruled by a "state committee" of 12 persons, with Hacha as president, and a council of 100 as advisers. The plan calls for both committee and council to be appointed without election.

Konrad Henlein, Nazi boss of the Sudentenland, who was named civil administrator in Bohemia to work with the army—which still rules Bohemia and Moravia—was understood to have ended his function.

Czech Fascists Not to Rule

Czech Fascists, it was understood, will not participate in the governing state committee. Rudolph Beran, last premier of Czecho-Slovakia, was expected to be one of the 12 on the "state committee."

Meanwhile, the United States, following the lead of Hungary, Italy and Poland, closed its legation.

Wilbur J. Carr, the American Minister and his wife, with Maj. Lowell Riley, military attache, will leave Prague within a few days after clearing up personal affairs.

Friends tonight reported the arrests of Dr. Franz Preininger, chief of the Czech secret police, and Franz Vancura, president of the Czech League Against Anti-Semitism. Vancura later was released.

Prague police denied wholesale arrests and suicides. They also denied that concentration camps had been established. It had been reported that at least four of these camps existed—at Motul, Milovice, Pardubitz and Ruzyn.

Fear Felt for Newsmen

Closing of the British Legation presents a problem, however. Four newspapermen, in fear of arrest, have received asylum there since German troops arrived. They are G. E. R. Gedye, of the New York Times; Douglas Reed, of the London News-Chronicle; Noel Panton, of the London Daily Telegraph, and H. P. Smollett, of the Exchange Telegraph Agency.

The German language has been adopted as a second language by the Prague city council, and orders have been issued that German could be used in public offices and theaters.

The anti-Semitic campaign under the German protectorate continued with confiscation of Jewish-owned automobiles and trucks in Slovakia to be used by Hlinka guards (Slovak storm troop).

France Sends Reserves to Maginot Line

Daladier, Wielding Dictatorial Powers, Lengthens Work Week

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 21.—An undisclosed number of French military reserves were called to the colors tonight to man the Maginot defense line facing Germany as Premier Daladier used dictatorial powers for marshaling France's resources to keep pace with the totalitarian states.

Many of the reservists were from the last two classes to have completed their compulsory military service.

Their summonses, issued soon after Daladier first wielded his new decree powers, were checked at the Paris East Station before they boarded trains for the northeast.

Labor's Work Week Lengthened

In addition to providing for the calling of reserves, Daladier's decrees lengthened labor's work week in an effort to speed production of military supplies.

Navy as well as army reservists were called up in today's orders.

In Paris stations many men who were mobilized last September again kissed their wives and sweethearts good-bye on the quays and boarded trains for military and naval posts.

The movement continued through the night, and a number of reservists received notices to leave tomorrow.

Many Parisians returned home tonight to find the following notice posted on their doors:

"Monsieur and Madame: The tenants are requested to go tomorrow, March 22, to (local police station) in order to claim their gas masks in person. Failure to follow this order will lead to fines."

An urgen meeting of representatives of war veterans from all the World War allied powers affiliated with Fidac (Interallied Federation of War Veterans) was called in Paris "to determine their action before the events which threaten the peace of the world."

The premier set out to recover French prestige in Europe, stand firm against Reichsfuehrer Hitler and possibly to try making friends with Premier Mussolini.

Less Overtime Pay

In one of 16 decrees issued today Daladier wiped out the 40-hour week maximum for the greater part of French industries and raised it to 60 hours.

The decree provided workers may be called on to stay on their jobs even more than 60 hours if the government considers it necessary. They will get less than previous overtime pay.

A government spokesman said the decrees were "only preparatory" and promised more when President Lebrun, who must sign them, returns Friday from London. French capitalists and middle-class small investors feared the next decrees would hit them.

Reaction of the man-on-the-boulevards to the use Daladier made of his unprecedented powers was a strange mixture of admiration for the "strong man" and fear he would go too far.

Although Foreign Minister Bonnet accompanied the president to London, the foreign office was busy getting reports of the chances for success of French-British efforts to stop further German expansion.

May See Chamberlain

Members in the Chamber of Deputies corridors said Premier Daladier may go to London after President Lebrun returns Friday, to spend a week-end with Prime Minister Chamberlain.

It was believed Daladier's mission would mean an even more intense activity in connection with Britain's efforts to form a "Stop Hitler" bloc.

The Quai D'Orsay also marked a step in its attempt to win Poland over to the French-British side with the announcement a new French-Polish commerical agreement would be signed tomorrow.

Reports in Chamber of Deputies circles said former Premier Laval might go to Rome in an attempt to bring about better French-Italian understanding, but the premier gave no indication he was planning to send Laval or any other special envoy to Rome.

cially friendly toward the Rome-Berlin axis."

It was believed Mussolini, in a detailed summary of "recent events" and an analysis of the international situation before the Grand Council, privately revealed the contents of ar eagerly awaited speech which he wil. deliver Sunday at 11 a. m. (5 a. m., E. S. T.) to 50,000 Blackshirts in the Mussolini Forum.

At that time he may formally announce—perhaps with Hitler's support—his Mediterranean demands against France.

Personal Message From Hitler

Il Duce last night received a personal message from Hitler, brought to Rome by the Italian Ambassador to Berlin, Bernardo Attolico.

The grand council's "order of the day" said that Italy reaffirmed her complete adherence to the Rome-Berlin axis "before the threatening creation of a united front of the democracies allied with bolshevism" against the totalitarian states.

"This is a forerunner of war and not of peace," the announcement said.

It was revealed that after Mussolini spoke on the menacing international situation the grand council listened to Foreign Minister Count Ciano, Marshal Balbo, Ambassador to London Dino Grandi, Propoganda Minister Achille Starace and Roberto Farinacci, ultra-Fascist leader of Cremona.

The summoning of more reservists to the colors in recent days was understood to have provided for very few exceptions. Those called up in previous weeks have been exempted from service if they had families to support or held responsible positions, but the new conscripts found scant chance of escaping active service.

Italy, it was explained by responsible Fascists, is determined to show the world she is ready for "any and all emergencies."

Ambassador Attolico arrived in Rome from Berlin two hours before the grand council adjourned.

Attolico, whose failure to greet Hitler in Berlin Sunday night when the latter returned from Czecho-Slovakia led to reports of a rift in Italo-German relations, was said to have instructions to deliver Hitler's message before Il Duce prepares Sunday's speech.

Italian leaders believed Mussolini's speech—his first since December—would contain a formal announcement of Italy's "natural aspiration" demands on France, or at least an analysis of what Italy wants in the Mediterranena.

Some informed observers suggested Hitler's message was the forerunner of "the first joint axis action in the international field." There was no amplification of what the action might be.

up the gauntlet against Germany on the battlefields of Flanders.

Following the victory of 1918 there were further demonstrations of friendship proving the strength of the link between two nations having withstood the test of fire and accumulated souvenirs of common glory.

But the problems of the post-war period caused frequent divergencies of views between the allies. The French and the British statesmen were perpetually at odds as to the decisions to be taken and sometimes adopted different methods. Germany took advantage of these quarrels.

After the failure of the disarmament conference in October, 1933, France and Great Britain should have realized that the time had come to revise their program and to re-establish close collaboration.

It was quite clear that if the Third Reich refused to accept agreement with the other powers on a limitation of armaments and deliberately broke with the League of Nations, this was because it definitely intended to reconstitute its army and aviation on a basis which would permit, first, equality with the most powerfully armed countries, then—if possible—of complete superiority in these different spheres.

The official denunciation of the military clauses of the Treaty of Versailles and the remilitarization of the Rhine provinces in March, 1936, were the first consequences of the weakness of French-British collaboration. To arouse British public opinion to a consciousness of facts there had to be the Abyssinian campaign and the sudden revelation of the Italian aspirations in the Mediterranean. In France, opinion was no less stirred by the violation of the Locarno agreements.

The coincidence of the ambitions of the two totalitarian states, the menace they constituted for Europe, and the revisionary claims loudly formulated by Hitler and Mussolini, opened the eyes of the British and French leaders. In order to parry the blow to the Locarno system and to reinforce security on the Continent, Great Britain solemnly proclaimed that she would defend France against any unprovoked aggression.

From that moment she undertook to study certain measures for a considerable strengthening of her own military position.

On December 4, 1936, Yvon Delbos, then minister of foreign affairs, declared in his turn and on behalf of France that all the forces of the country would be immediately utilized to support those of Great Britain if that country were to be attacked. Confidence and close diplomatic consultation was re-established after a long period of disturbance and there were numerous professions and acts of solidarity.

Meanwhile Germany, emboldened by her initial success, pushed forward her rearmament, exercised an increasing pressure on Central and Eastern Europe and carried off the anschluss in March, 1938. To compensate Italy, Germany promised to support the latter's African and Mediterranean claims.

To respond to unmeasured ambitions and the ceaseless progress of Pan-Germanism, the London-Paris axis decided that the time had come to demonstrate the complete harmony of their views and the solidity of their own system. The French visit of King George VI in July, 1938, was the symbol of a reconstituted and revivified entente cordiale transformed into a veritable alliance.

This visit had been preceded by diplomatic negotiations in the course of which the system of security had been perfected by definite agreements in the air, military and naval fields registered on April 29, 1938.

There were two essential factors in the French-British alliance. Defense and pacification. For the purpose of defense, rearmament was to proceed apace and the forces of the two countries were to be determined by consultation between the general staffs. As regards pacification, the British statesmen envisaged the possibility of a rapprochement between France and Italy designed to complete their own agreement with Rome on the status of the Mediterranean. For central Europe they thought that a tranactional basis could be found which would satisfy the Hitler government. They further envisaged an attempt to revive European trade and to bring about reconciliation on the basis of Cordell Hull's principles for general business recovery.

What has become of all these hopes is common knowledge.

How, after so many failures, could the great democracies have remained inactive? How could they have refrained from a further alignment of their policies?

And they have not refrained. There has been a further consolidation of Franco-British relations. Witness all the recent declarations by Neville Chamberlain and Lord Halifax for Great Britain, and by Edouard Daladier and Georges Bonnet for France.

It is certain that the European situation cannot be described as reassuring. But there are prospects of improvements. And the best reason for taking a not too pessimistic view is that the United States, under President Roosevelt's leadership, is gradually modifying its policy of neutrality.

But for the Old World the whole system of security is based upon France and Great Britain—and these powers have henceforth a common destiny. The future of Europe depends upon their courage, their initiative, their discipline in action.

From the standpoint of the higher interests of mankind and of peace, President Lebrun's journey will be all the more fruitful as Franco-British solidarity is strengthened, and constitutes a rampart of security and a symbol of better times for Europe.

Ukrainians in Hungary Start Drive for Independent State

White Russian Officers Raise Czarist Flag in Ungvar; Hope to Carve a Free Nation From 3 European Powers and Soviets

By the Associated Press.

Ungvar, Hungary, March 21.—Leaders of Carpatho-Ukraine hope to become the guiding influence of all the 43,000,000 Ukrainians—including those in Soviet Russia, Poland and Rumania.

They hope to do this, Ukranian chiefs said today, with German support and through the autonomous administration promised by Hungary.

Hungary annexed Carpatho-Ukraine, the former Czecho-Slovak district, last week.

White Russian officers in Czarist uniforms hoisted the flag of Czarist Russia over Ungvar yesterday.

Officials said the flag had not been made the official emblem for the newly annexed district, but posters declared "sub-Carpathian Russia can be expected actively to fight bolshevism. They hope they may have a chance to help free their oppressed brothers in Ukraine proper."

(London newspapers last December reported the Grand Duke Vladimir, pretender to the old Russian throne, figured in German plans for domination of the Ukraine.)

Ukrainian leaders said Hungary would receive Ruthenian salt and timber, which she needs, and can sell her agricultural and manufactured products.

ate, in particular, of the protection of its nationals in foreign countries. The former diplomatic representatives of Czecho-Slovakia in foreign countries are no longer qualified for official acts."

Nevertheless, this country still recognizes Vladimir Hurban, Czecho-Slovakian Minister here, who continues to hold possession of the legation in face of demands that he surrender it to agents of the German Embassy.

Dispatches from Berlin last night said the German foreign office gave the United States note a "casual" reception and indicated disinclination to concern itself further with the matter. There was continued talk, however, of imposing retaliatory tariff duties against some American goods, as reply to the 25 per cent countervailing duties levied Saturday by this country on many products of the Czech-Slovak regions actually under German control.

Tax Up to 98.02 Per Cent

The Bone war-tax bill would involve personal income and corporation taxes in time of war.

Individuals would pay a normal tax of 6 per cent with surtax rates ranging from 10 to 93 per cent. An individual income of $1,000,000 would be taxed a total of $980,210, or 98.02 per cent.

Personal exemptions would be lowered to $500 for single persons and $1,000 for married couples, with only $100 for each dependent. Present exemptions are $1,000, $2,500 and $400.

Corporations would bear a tax of 15 per cent on net incomes not in excess of 2 per cent of their adjusted declared value; 25 per cent on incomes in excess of 6 per cent of such value, and 100 per cent on net incomes of a greater amount.

"This would make it impossible for any human being to profiteer from war," Bone said.

Text of U. S. Note to Germany on Czechs

America Refuses to Recognize Legal Basis For Protectorate

The text of the United States note to Germany on what that country's assumption of a protectorate over Bohemia and Moravia follows:

March 20, 1939.
Herr Hans Thomsen,
Charge d'Affaires ad Interim of Germany,
Sir:

I acknowledge the receipt of your note of March 17 in which, by direction of your government, you inform the Government of the United States of the terms of the decree issued on March 16 by the government of the Reich announcing the assumption of a protectorate over the Provinces of Bohemia and Moravia.

The Government of the United States has observed that the provinces referred to are now under the de facto administration of the German authorities. The Government of the United States does not recognize that any legal basis exists for the status so indicated.

The views of this Government with regard to the situation above referred to, as well as with regard to related facts, were made known on March 17. I inclose herewith for the information of your government a copy of the statement in which those views were expressed.

Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my high considerdation.

SUMNER WELLES,
Acting Secretary of State.

Statement by the Acting Secretary of State

The Government of the United States has on frequent occasions stated its conviction that only through international support of a program of order based upon law can world peace be assured.

This Government, founded upon and dedicated to the principles of human liberty and of democracy, cannot refrain from making known this country's condemnation of the acts which have resulted in the temporary extinguishment of the liberties of a free and independent people with whom, from the day when the Republic of Czecho-Slovakia attained its independence, the people of the United States have maintained specially close and friendly relations.

The position of the Government of the United States has been made consistently clear. It has emphasized the need for respect for the sanctity of treaties and of the pledged word, and for non-intervention by any nation in the domestic affairs of other nations; and it has on repeated occasions expressed its condemnation of a policy of military aggression.

It is manifest that acts of wanton lawlessness and of arbitrary force are threatening world peace and the very structure of modern civilization. The imperative need for the observance of the principles advocated by this Government has been clearly demonstrated by the developments which have taken place during the past three days.

The text of the German note to the United States on the Reich's assumption of a protectorate over Bohemia and Moravia follows:

German Embassy,
Washington, D. C.,
March 17, 1939.

His Excellency,
Cordell Hull,
Secretary of State of the United States,
Washington, D. C.

Mr. Secretary of State:

By direction of the German government, I have the honor to notify the Government of the United States of America of the following decree of March 16 of the government of the Reich on the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia:

"Article 1. The areas of the former Czecho-Slovak republic occupied by German troops belong from now on to the domain of the greater German Reich and come under its protection as the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia.

"Article 2. The German inhabitants of the protectorate become nationals and, under the provisions of the Reich citizens law of September, 1935, citizens of the Reich. With respect to them, therefore, the provisions for the protection of the German blood and the German honor also apply. They are subject to the jurisdiction of German courts. The other inhabitants become nationals of the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia.

"Article 3. The proctectorate is autonomous and administers its own affairs. It exercises its rights of sovereignty granted it within the framework of the protectorate in harmony with the political, military and economic requirements of the Reich. The rights of sovereignty will be exercised by its own organs and its own authorities with officials of its own.

"Article 4. The head of the autonomous government of the protectorate enjoys the protection and the honors of the head of a state. The head of the protectorate must have the confidence of the Fuehrer and the chancellor of the Reich for the exercise of his office.

"Article 5. As protector of the interests of the Reich, the Fuehrer and chancellor of the Reich appoints the Reich protector in Bohemia and Moravia, whose seat is Prague. The Reich protector has the duty of seeing to the observance of the political policies of the Fuehrer and chancellor of the Reich. The members of the protectorate government are confirmed by the Reich protector. The latter is empowered to have himself informed regarding all measures of the government of the protectorate and to give it advice. He may veto measures capable of injuring the Reich, and in case there is danger in delay, he may take the measures necessary for the common interest. The promulgation of laws, regulations and other legal prescriptions, as well as the execution of administrative measures and court orders having the force of law is to be suspended if the Reich proctector interposes a veto.

"Article 6. The Reich takes charge of the foreign affairs of the protectorate, and in particular of the protection of its nationals in foreign countries. The Reich will conduct foreign affairs in accordance with the common interests. The protectorate is given a representative near the Reich government with the official designation of minister.

"Article 7. The Reich grants military protection to the protectorate. In the exercise of this protection, the Reich maintains garrisons and military establishments in the protectorate. For maintaining internal security and order, the protectorate may organize its own units. Their organization, strength, number and armament are determined by the government of the Reich.

"Article 8. The Reich exercises direct supervision over transportation, mail and telecommunications.

"Article 9. The protectorate belongs to the customs territory of the Reich and is under its customs sovereignty.

"Article 10. Until further notice, the crown is legal tender together with the reichsmark. The relation of the two currencies to each other is determined by the Reich government.

"Article 11. The Reich can issue legal regulations valid for the protectorate in so far as the common interests so require. In so far as a common need exists, the Reich can transfer administrative branches to its own administration and provide the officials belonging to the Reich who are needed therefor. The government of the Reich can take the measures necessary for the maintenance of security and order.

"Article 12. The law in effect in Bohemia and Moravia remains in force, in so far as it does not contradict the sense of the assumption of protection by the German Reich.

"Article 13. The Reich minister of the interior issues in agreement with the Reich ministers concerned, the legal and administrative regulations necessary for the execution and supplementing of this decree."

Under Article 6 of this decree the German Reich takes charge of the foreign affairs protectorate in particular, of the protection of its nationals in foreign countries. The former diplomatic representatives of Czecho-Slovakia in foreign countries are no longer qualified for official acts.

Accept, Mr. Secretary of State, the renewed assurance of my most distinguished consideration.

(Signed) THOMSEN.

French Chiefs In London to Map Policy

Bonnet and Lebrun Hope to Stop Hitler; Cheered by Throngs

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 21.—French President Lebrun and Foreign Minister Bonnet came to London today to cement the Anglo-French alliance, which must be the keystone to any serious "Stop Hitler" policy, to halt the alarming spread of German hegemony over Europe.

King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax turned out to welcome the Frenchmen when their boat train pulled into Victoria station. Driving to Buckingham Palace with the King and Queen, M. Lebrun and Mme. Lebrun received repeated ovations from tens of thousands of Britishers.

Crowd at Palace

Outside the Palace the crowd gathered and shouted: "We want the President," and "We want the King," until both President and King obliged by making an appearance on the balcony, followed by their wives.

For the next three days there will be a round of banquets and ceremonies in which the King and Queen will repay the hospitality they received on their Paris trip last July.

Meanwhile, the foreign minister will be busy behind the scene, arranging a joint Anglo-French foreign policy which can be counted upon either to halt Hitler or to pave the way for a fate worse than Munich. Bonnet's first talk was with Lord Halifax at the foreign office this evening.

The British, who are still withholding announcement whether they will fight for Rumania if the Nazis force their attentions upon King Carol's country, had another and more immediate problem tossed in their laps when news reached London that Lithuania, yielding to political and military pressure, is about to surrender the Memel territory to Germany.

There is some fear that Germany intends eventually to establish a protectorate over all of Lithuania after the manner of Czecho-Slovakia. With a foothold in Lithuania, Germany would be in a position to attempt to short cut across the Vilna area of Poland to get at Russia.

Menace to Poland

Even if she refrains from such an invasion, a grip on Lithuania by Germany would be a constant menace to both Poland and Russia, and might tend to immobilize them if and when Germany strikes to the southeast against Rumania for Yugoslavia.

These contingencies doubtlessly were discussed today when the Polish Ambassador, Count Raczynski, saw Lord Halifax at the foreign office. During their 40-minute talk diplomatic circles were hearing that the transfer of Memel was a matter of days or hours only, and that Lithuanian troops had begun evacuating that port which Germany lost with the World War and now is to recover without firing a shot.

The Germans have been concentrating troops in East Prussia to march into Memel, and later on perhaps into Danzig.

Tonight, even as the King and Queen and their French guests, as well as leading British statesmen, were dining off the gold plate at Buckingham Palace, the British Broadcasting Corporation disseminated a news agency report indicating that the Germans are applying to Lithuania the "third degree" tactics used against the Czechs.

The ominous report was that when German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop received the Lithuanian Foreign Minister Urbsys, in Berlin Monday, he served him with an ultimatum threatening that Germany would invade Lithuania within five days, unless Lithuania surrendered Memel.

British Are Resigned

The Lithuanian went home sadly to ratify another Nazi fait accompli, in return for which Germany is to guarantee Lithuania's frontiers for whatever the guarantee may be worth.

Both the British and the Poles seem resigned to the annexation of Memel to the Reich. The British do not think Hitler would be rash enough to follow the Memel coup with a protectorate over the rest of Lithuania.

"That would be too much; just the sort of thing we are waiting for; he couldn't get away with it this time," reporters were told in Whitehall. Of course, they were told similar things before Munich.

More light was thrown on the Rumanian war scare today, when it was learned that Poland is trying to mediate between Rumania and Hungary to head off any war between the two countries, in which Hungary would be backed by Germany's armed forces, and Rumania, unless Russia, France and Britain supported her with more than words, would face partititon and a protectorate.

Although little has leaked into print about it, Hungary for some time has been pressing Rumania to give it the large province of Transylvania, which belonged to the old Austro-Hungarian empire. The Hungarian claims become all the stronger now that Germany has occupied Czecho-Slovakia and is that much closer to the Rumanian frontiers.

sovereigns of the continent did homage.

But these astonishing tales have tragic endings, and in both of them Great Britain is the villain of the piece—for it was the British who burnt the maid at Rouen and it was the British who sent the Emperor to pine away on a lonely island.

But these old wrongs are all forgotton or only remembered as the quarrels of childhood are remembered by grown-up people who are indeed the firmer friends on account of the memory of past blows and tears.

Waited Upon Prisoners

Wars in the past were perhaps easier to forget, owing to the spirit of chivalry in which they were conducted. We all remember how after the King of France had been captured in battle, the Black Prince himself waited upon his prisoner at table. We remember, too, how when the Blind King of Bohemia—that name which rings a knell in our hearts today—perished fighting gloriously against Great Britain, the Black Prince out of admiration adopted the dead king's motto for his own, "Ich Dien," which remains to this day the motto of the Prince of Wales.

There is another British-French prisoner of war story belonging to a much later period which illustrates the relations that could still exist between captor and captive even in the Napoleonic age. The Count de Montrond, wit and dandy, intimate friend of Talleyrand, fell into the hands of the British and was for some time a prisoner in a British man-of-war.

He soon established excellent relations with the officers and became an honorary member of the mess. After dinner one evening, the captain—more convinced than courteous — gave the toast, "Frenchmen," and added, "they are scoundrels without exception." Montrond drank the toast and proposed another.

"Drink to the British," he said. "They are a nation of gentlemen, but," bowing low to the captain, "there are exceptions."

Center of Cheering

The reception that was accorded to the King and Queen during their visit to Paris last summer was, according to the testimony of all who witnessed it, something that had to be seen to be believed.

It is one of the disadvantages, inseparable from the republican form of government, that no president can hope to command the prestige and glamor of a crowned head. But M. Lebrun, who is now concluding his term of office, has an impeccable record of achievement through seven long, anxious years, and the British men must see to it that the welcome they accord to him is worthy of the occasion, is a just tribute to the man and a convincing proof of their affection for the country that he represents.

The British are not a demonstrative people. Cheers stick in their throats. Self-consciousness glues their hands to their sides. British men fear making fools of themselves more than they fear death.

So the French president, I hope, will forgive the British people if he detects a host of glum and stolid faces among the crowds that come and greet him.

Many in Great Britain regret that the program does not include any naval or military demonstration. When the King went to Versailles the French army and air force were paraded for his benefit and the spectacle was deeply impressive.

Thought of defense can never be far absent from our minds in times like these, but perhaps the decision was wise to omit any item that could possibly be considered provocative from a series of events which are designed to show only the absolute solidarity of the two great democracies who are united in all things but most of all in their desire for peace.

But if that great end is to be accomplished, if peace is yet to be preserved, proof must be given not only that the two democracies are solid with one another but also that they are solid within themselves.

Deep differences of opinion, no doubt, divide the right from the left in both countries, but there are two sentiments that unite them—devotion to liberty and independence, and determination to preserve them.

Senate Kills President's Merger Powers

Offices

Republican, doesn't approve of motions that cut off debate. Borah's failure to vote brought a tie on the tabling motion, and the clincher lost. Vice President Garner could have broken the tie but he also reneged.

Byrnes to Renew Motion

Net result was that Clark's original motion to reconsider the Wheeler vote was left before the Senate. Clark served notice that he will withdraw it, but Byrnes, who is managing the bill, will promptly renew the motion and demand another roll call. Meanwhile the Wheeler amendment remains in the bill.

Administration forces will be active overnight in an effort to recoup a loss that may mean complete abandonment of the reorganization program. President Roosevelt is not expected to sign the bill if the Wheeler amendment is included. And House leaders have warned that they would table the bill rather than accept it.

Success of the Montanan's amendment followed warnings by Wheeler, Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, that approval of the bill as passed by the House would be tantamount to "abdication" by Congress of legislative functions and sing a confession of Congressional "impotence."

President Given Power

The House bill, now before the Senate, gives the President power to formulate reorganization plans that would become law within 60 days unless both Houses of Congress adopted a concurrent resolution disapproving the plan. Thus, in effect, if one House approved and the other disapproved, the President's reorganization plan would take effect anyway.

Wheeler contended Congress has no legal right to grant away its power in this way, and insisted any merger plan submitted by the President "shall not become effective until after enactment of a joint resolution specifically approving such plan." His amendment requires a vote on the marger plans by both Houses within ten days of their submission.

Wrangle Over Power

Through most of the afternoon Senators had wrangled over whether the President is given power in the bill to completely abolish "functions" of Government as well as agencies.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, had argued the President would be given no such authority.

Senator Wheeler and Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, contended otherwise. They quoted a section of the bill empowering the President "to reduce the number of * * * agencies by consolidating those having similar function under a single head, and to abolish such agencies or such functions thereof as may not be necessary for the efficient conduct of the Government."

Senator O'Mahoney offered an eleventh-hour clarifying amendment which in effect would give the President no authority to completely abolish an agency until its "functions" have been transferred to another bureau. Byrnes assented to this modification, and it is expected to be included in the already drastically curtailed measure.

Hatch Answers Charges

Earlier, Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, had taken the floor to reply to charges by Wheeler and Tydings that Congress, in approving the reorganization bill, would be following the European trend toward abandonment of parliamentary prerogatives. Hatch charged an "unwarranted" effort to compare President Roosevelt's powers with those of Adolf Hitler, and declared there was no analogy in the German Reichstag's surrender of its powers.

McCarran charged Hatch had "only illustrated and amplified the fact that unless Congress curbs a movement in the country against legislative Government, we will arrive at the same result."

Gillette Defends Method

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, one of the original authors of the proposed "veto" over merger orders provided in the House bill, took the floor in defense of this method. He contended the bill merely gives the President power "to investigate and report a reorganization plan, and after that it is up to us."

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, said Gillette underestimated the power grant in the bill. He pointed out that plans "reported" by the President would become law within 60 days unless both houses disapproved.

Senator Clark also entered the argument to contend there is no constitutional authority for "a delegation of power permitting these reports to become law with only one house approving.

Senator Wheeler pitched into the fray to hammer home points for his own amendment. He told the Senate that if Congress can delegate reorganization powers to the President it can delegate other legislative functions, such as the power to impeach, to declare war, to make and spend appropriations, and to raise and lower taxes.

World Giving Liberty Away, Says Sizoo

REV. DR. JOSEPH SIZOO

Dictators Welcomed By Mankind Itself, Says Epiphany Talker

Dictators could never have come to power if mankind had not welcomed them, Dr. Joseph Sizoo, pastor of St. Nicholas' Collegiate Church, New York City, yesterday warned more than 1,400 at Epiphany noon-day Lenten services.

Former pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and one of the Nation's foremost spiritual leaders, he advised his audience that "dictators did not steal their power—it was given to them. They arose because the world desired them. They did not force themselves upon the people, the people forced them into existence."

"Freedom Is Passing"

"Freedom is passing from the earth," said Dr. Sizoo, "not because it was taken away, but because it was given away. People may regret today that they gave away their freedom, but they did not regret it at that hour.

"Dictators do not invite participation, they command allegiance," he continued. "They do not welcome discussion, they silence criticism. They do not appeal to the individual, they crush the individual. They do not appease man, they conscript man."

Declaring that "you can always know an age by its symbol," Dr. Sizoo said that "it is a significant fact that the symbols of today are the hooked cross, the fasces, and the cycle and hammer, all of which are symbols of slavery."

"Does Not Want Freedom"

"Humanity seemingly does not want freedom," he asserted. "We have capitulated personal rights, and we have lost self-confidence. The cry of this generation is the cry of the prodigal son . . . 'make me a hired servant.'"

Dr. Sizoo insisted "liberty and freedom will never return until civilization gets a new reverence for life." We must 'go home' again, he said.

Pastor of the oldest church in North America, 310 years of age, located at Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street, near Radio City, Dr. Sizoo will speak at 12:05 today on "We Will Not Have This Man to Reign Over Us."

Bernard G. Richards To Speak on Jewry

Tax Revision In Study Stage, Says Roosevelt

Business

or on both large and small corporations.

If the income tax is stepped up on all corporations to offset the loss, he said, it will work a hardship on small corporations. About 153,000 small corporations whose income is less than $10,000 a year, he said, could be expected to protest.

If corporations whose net income is in excess of $1,000,000 a year—the ones that are urging repeal of the minor taxes—were called upon to make up the lost revenue through an increase in their income taxes, he said, they probably would be dissatisfied.

He remarked that corporations could not have their cake and eat it, too.

Makes Change Doubtful

The President said he was sending to Harrison the figures he had requested. He did not reveal what the figures showed.

His comments, observers believed, make doubtful any appreciable change in the corporation tax structure in the interest of business recovery. The implication was that simplification of the tax structure by repeal of the excess profits and capital stock taxes would raise difficulties likely to be insurmountable.

So far as the undistributed profits tax is concerned, the President recalled that one of its purposes was to prevent avoidance of income taxes by wealthy persons. There is no more reason for abandoning this principle, he said, than there is for again permitting incorporation of yachts as a means of reducing individual income taxes.

Doubts Economy Possibility

Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether he regarded as practical a long-range program which would reduce taxes in expectation that resultant business expansion would bring in revenues over a five-year period to equal the loss. He apparently misunderstood the question, since his reply related to the Congressional economy movement.

He indicated he still adheres to the policy outlined in the annual message to Congress of continuing for the present relief and related expenditures.

"In other words," he said, "we have the choice of following the policy recommended in the annual message or adopting the policy which has been advanced by perfectly well-meaning people; that it, cutting down certain expenditures of the Government, which, as I pointed out in that annual message, must, in order to be substantial, come out of certain obvious items which can be readily cut.

"They include: relief for the unemployed, all forms of public works, social security for the aged, slum clearance and various other items which today give work in large volume—all of those being predicated on the guess of many well-meaning people that thereby, taking away employment from several million workers, business will automatically pick up and employ that entire slack plus the other large number of people who are out of work but not in any way being helped by the Government.

Says He Said "Mouthful"

"If there was some guarantee that this would happen, it would be worth considering. I doubt, however, whether this would meet with popular approval if it were tried and the results were not attained.

"There is the answer. It is purely extemporaneous but I think I said a mouthful."

The Treasury, meanwhile, revealed that income tax collections for the first 20 days of March totaled $473,132,052, as compared with $685,689,563 in the first 21 days of March, 1938.

Despite the 30 per cent drop, collections were substantially above estimates. Because the recession cut heavily into income in the first half of 1938, Treasury experts had anticipated collections amounting only to $425,000,000 for the entire month.

In Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

MAYTIME IN MAYFAIR: Looking 'way ahead—but you'd better set any and all days aside in May's first week for the celebration of Mayfair's fourth birthday. Mayfair's birthday parties rank among the top fiestas of the year—big crowds, posies for everyone, gayety undiluted. Put a big bracket across the first week in May on your calendar, and mark it "Mayfair."

What currently local dancing pretty had a date with John Boles? Blonde? You're right on that part of the guess.

CUTEST TRICK: Honey Murray doing her "Harlem Strut" in Shoreham's Blue Room. But a lot of competition from Norma Gallo presenting "Song of India" in swing time at the same enameled spot.

A prize of one large bubble will be given to the person correctly naming the boy dancer around town who uses rose-colored nail polish.

WORK, S'HELP US: Paul Kain's Metronome Room Orchestra is on duty at WJSV from 3:15 to 7:15 every afternoon, then plays at Metronome from 10 p. m. to 2 in the morning. If you don't think that an 8-hour day split in two like that isn't a real chore, you're crazy. But being that Paul and his boys are crazy enough to play every minute of it hot, sweet and swingy, it must be strictly all right.

A Social Registerite is now driving cab around town. Not for long, we think, because his spirit is all right—he's just had a temporary crackup. But he never halts his cab when one of his sassiety friends hails it.

NOVACHORDING: Rainbow Room's Milton Davis tells us that he plays his new novachord mostly as a violin-piano combi, doing the violin with his left hand, the piano with the right. The customers are also very fond of the Hawaiian guitar a la novachord. You'd better call "Mac" for reservations if you want to hear the novachord, because last Saturday eve they had to lock the Rainbow Room doors at 10:20.

Get Mischa, of the Troika, to tell you his stories about witchcraft cures in Old Russia. Mischa says he doesn't believe in them although he saw them, but they'll make you say, "Fevvensakes! Another vodka!"

HI HAT CHERRY BLOSSOMS: No matter whether the cherry trees bloom or not, there's going to be a special "Cherry Blossom Cocktail" in Hi Hat come Friday. Oscar says it will be made of French vermouth and port with a fairly immoderate smidgeon of gin. He'd like to float cherry blossom peals on top of it, but fears that would be agin the law.

Your columnist recently was transported by a taxi driver who was a former Trappist monk. Between the Cafe Caprice and the Uptown we were no end enlightened on the resemblance between the finer points to the theology of Catholicism and Buddhism.

"STUDY IN BROWN:" That's the name of the little known but highly impressionistic tune to which Mimi Walters is adroitly tap dancing at Lotus. Mimi is one of the stars of the Francis Allis Dancers who are also presenting a spirited Russian dance, a study in the modern indigo mood and a rainbow musical comedy number. All very fine. New at Lotus are ballroom dancers, Neal and Nadine, completely Manhattan and sophisticated.

Sideline Colloquy: "You're going places with her, of course?" "Well, not to speak of." "How about to print of?" "That's what I meant." Tsk! tsk!

FAMOUS FACES IN SHAR-ZAD: Attorney General Frank Murphy, head G-man Edgar Hoover, socialites George Grant Mason and Edward J. Noble.

Ringside Remark (Blue Room): Why does Barnee wear a mask when he plays "Ferdinand the Bull?" (Fie!)

Priceless duck. Derby, Jr. Duck with Al Simmonds, of the Brown Derby

BAMBOO JITTERS: A boy named Ravage (!) and a girl named Renee are currently panicking Bamboo Gardens. This enterprising pair are doing a rumba that rumbles, a jitterbug number that will start you on a nervous breakdown. Their flair for these contrasted types of dancing leads us to believe that they're those legendary Latins from Manhattan. The "Dance Cocktails" are winding up their final week in a blaze of stepping. You're making a big mistake if you miss 'em.

Next Table Echo: So I drank four tablespoonfuls of olive oil before starting on this party. Don't ever tell me about it again. Did I— anyway you could detect me a block away.

THIS AFTERNOON AT FIVE: You should be at the Hour Glass watching those beautiful mannequins parading the new Easter styles across the top of the H. G. bar. If you don't get there early, just try and get a table.

Ringside Cynic. When she sings "Deep Purple" it is just "Pale Lavender."

SKYLINE MELODY: Carr and Don (Madrillon) due-piano-ing the ever-enchanting "Tea for Two."

Belle Smith (Pall Mall) making "Hurry Home" practically irresistible.

Jimmy Nichols (Lounge Riviera) giving the azure touch to "Heaven Can Wait."

Swift Approval Of Rutledge as Judge Forecast

Sen. King Prefers Local Lawyer for D. C. Appeals Court

Rutledge

fessor of law at the University of Washington, St. Louis, and was subsequently promoted to dean. Since 1935 he has been both professor and dean of law at the University of Iowa.

Active on Uniform Laws

Within recent years Rutledge has been active in the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

Friends of Dean Rutledge, who is a popular figure in Iowa City and the Midwest, characterize him as "a man whose perspective encompasses more than his profession," according to the Associated Press correspondent at Iowa City.

He has a thoughtful face, deep voice and a reputation for tolerance and the courage of his convictions.

Rutledge once defined democracy as "a system of limited and responsible freedom" and "a perpetual compromise, ever shifting in its major incidence upon particular human interests, between security and change.

"What it gives or permits us today," he said, "it takes away tomorrow. But it always brings to us and to others new freedom to take the place of those which vanish with the past.

"What men lose today as individuals they gain tomorrow as groups. Thus democracy fills tomorrow with opportunities just as glorious as it gave us yesterday. Its work is never finished. It is only beginning."

Corporation Law Expert

Recognized as having a profound interest in corporation law and the corporation as "a social institution," he has been engaged in writing a book on the subject after having made an intensive study of the social significance of private corporations and their relation to the Roosevelt Adminstration.

Known as one of the most brilliant lecturers at the University of Iowa, he terms speaking as one of his personal interests. Others include reading, and mowing the lawn.

"I am not a radical in any sense of the word," he once stated, "but I cannot remain blind to the ills of the present system, and I am interested in seeing them remedied as far as possible."

A scholar, he chose Latin and Greek as his major studies at the University of Wisconsin. Before obtaining his law degree, he taught school in Indiana, New Mexico and Colorado.

Although he lacks courtroom experience, Dean Rutledge is an acknowledged authority on law and judicial procedure.

King's Chaplain Suggests Roosevelt Head Parley for Removal of Barriers to Peace

Defends Conservatives Against Charges of Betrayal at Munich

A suggestion that President Roosevelt take the lead in calling a conference of nations to discuss the removal of economic barriers to peace was advanced here last night by Canon Charles E. Raven, chaplain to the King of England and a leading English pacifist.

"I don't think your President should hesitate to give a lead in Europe," he said, speaking before the Washington branch of the Fellowship of Reconciliation at the American Association of University Women Building. He proposes that such a conference consider lowering tariff barriers, rehabilitation loans to destitute nations and lay the groundwork for "some sort of a new league of nations."

Canon Raven is president of the British Fellowship of Reconciliation and master of Christ College, Cambridge. He has been a chaplain to the King since 1919, being nearly the oldest in point of service.

Speaking of the role of the United States in world affairs, the canon said:

"The co-operation of this great people in restoring the economic welfare of the world will be welcomed by us in Europe, but you cannot expect us to welcome you if you say, 'We will fight for civilization if Europe supplies the blood and we only supply the money and the machines.'"

He defended the Conservative government of Britain against charges of a "betrayal at Munich," although he is a man "who has voted Labor all my life. I should not be desperately sorry to see southeastern Europe dominated by Germany," he said. "At least the radical group would get a fairer deal than now."

Canon Raven is on a tour of the United States sponsored by the Fellowship of Reconciliation. Earlier yesterday he addressed the clergy of Washington at a luncheon in the Washington Cathedral. He will leave today for Baltimore.

The Rev. Dr. Charles Earle Raven (right), chaplain to King George VI, of England, is in Washington as the guest of Canon Anson Phelps Stokes (left), of the Washington Cathedral. Spy to Appeal Prison Sentence

Los Angeles, March 21 (AP).—Mikhail Gorin, sentenced in Federal Court yesterday to serve a six-year prison term and fined $10,000 on espionage charges, filed notice of appeal in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals today. Counsel for Hafis Salich, sentenced to four years and fined $10,000, indicated they would file a similar notice soon.

Gorin contended his indictment failed to state a crime against the United States as defined in the espionage act; that the evidence was insufficient; that the court erred in not granting a motion to quash, barred pertinent evidence.

Ruling Expected Today on Control Of Pedestrians

A court ruling on legality of the new pedestrian control laws is expected today when Bernard Klateman, florist, faces Judge John P. McMahon in Traffic Court in the first "test" case since the regulations were adopted March 10.

Klateman was arrested at a downtown intersection and accused of disobeying a traffic light and the signal of a police officer. He announced he would "fight the case to the limit" and retained two attorneys.

Several years ago Judge McMahon dismissed a similar case.

Parole Hearings Set Tomorrow

Twenty-four Lorton prisoners eligible for freedom will be given a hearing tomorrow by the parole board.

The following will be heard: Daniel Adams, James Frye, Booker M. McDougal, Tene Bimbo, Charles Torre, George J. Vorobey, Thomas J. Panapoulos, Fred B. Smithwick, Guy W. Snyder, Irving Marshall, Henry B. Pollor, Carroll F. Swann, Nathaniel Robinson, Charles Green, Raymond K. Robertson, Preston Hymes, Benny Witherspoon, James R. Young, Edward W. Culpepper, Andrew R. Banker Wins Alienation Suit Against Dr. Curtiss

New York, March 21 (AP).—Justice John F. Carew in Supreme Court today awarded $25,000 damages to Herbert R. Stevens, New York banker against Dr. F. Homer Curtiss, of Washington, whom the plaintiff charged with having alienated the affections of his wife, the former Eleanor Chapman Stevens, now married to Dr. Curtiss.

Stevens, who is 54, contended that he and Mrs. Stevens had lived happily until 1933, when she heard Dr. Curtiss lecture here, and that subsequently she married Dr. Curtiss in Florida.

Stevens sued for $250,000.

Fashion Show To Open Friday

A delegation of Harrisonburg, Va., society women have chartered a bus to attend the Connecticut Avenue Association's fashion show at the Mayflower Hotel, it was announced yesterday.

Proprietors of smart Connecticut Avenue shops are working feverishly to prepare exhibits in the show. Facsimiles of shop fronts to be erected tomorrow night will convert the hotel promenade from the cocktail lounge to Seventeenth street into a miniture Connecticut avenue. The show will open at 1 p. m. Friday.

Clerics to Discuss Poverty on Radio

Catholic, Protestant and Jewish leaders will discuss "The Churches' Responsibility for Poverty" on a People's Lobby broadcast Saturday from the National Press Club.

They will include Dr. Sydney E. Goldstein, of the Central Conference of American Rabbis; Dr. James Myers, of the Federal Council of Church of Christ in America, and the Right Rev. John O'Grady, of the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

TELEVISION EXPERT SAYS:

"It's Refreshing to Let up—Light up a mild, good-tasting Camel"

Copyright, 1939 R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company Winston-Salem, N. C.

READY? A television broadcast is about to begin. Everyone feels excitement in the air. Philco engineer Richard E. Waggener knows exactly what to do. He passes Camels, takes one himself . . . a mild, good-tasting Camel! "It's grand for one's poise to let up and light up a Camel."

RECEIVING the show with a home set: Mrs. Dorothy Temple, who runs a home, has a job too. She is enjoying a cigarette—a Camel—for, like so many women, she finds a delicate fragrance in Camels that is very appealing. "Camels taste so good," she says. "They do have a wonderful mildness."

THE SMILE OF ANTICIPATION: Dick finds a moment to enjoy a Camel. "Camels are different," he says, "mild, full-flavored. I smoke all I want, and they never jangle my nerves."

250 WORDS PER MINUTE! Harry L. White can take down legal testimony up to 250 words per minute, for he is an expert court reporter. "After catching questions and answers on the fly, hour after hour, believe me, it feels good to let up—light up a Camel. 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'" Camels have the rich, ripe flavor of finer, milder tobaccos. You'll find those choice tobaccos do make a difference!

Franco's Blunder

There is an interesting contrast between the attitude of Gen. Franco and that of the Government of the United States with reference to the German seizure of Czecho-Slovakia.

The dictator of Nationalist Spain has congratulated his German counterpart on "the peaceful reincorporation of old Reich districts within the borders of Germany." To Mr. Sumner Welles, the Acting Secretary of State, the same action appears as an act of "wanton lawlessness" by Germany. And in the note delivered to the German charge d'affaires on Monday, it was definitely stated that "the Government of the United States does not recognize that any legal basis exists" for the change which Germany has wrought by force.

The great majority of Americans strongly approve the attitude of the Administration toward Hitler's latest outrage. And they will compare that attitude, to the detriment of Gen. Franco, with the Spanish Fuehrer's eagerness to acclaim the total destruction of the Czech democracy and his willingness to distort history in doing so. If Gen. Franco is to be taken seriously as a chief of state, he or his advisers ought to know that Bohemia and Moravia were never districts of the modern German Reich and therefore could not be "reincorporated within the borders of Germany."

One may pass over Franco's definition of "peaceful." Compared with his own peculiar method of "liberating" Spain, that description of the German entry into Prague is perhaps justified. But it would be as historically accurate to call Spain itself an ancient colony of Italy as to define Bohemia as an "old Reich district." This the Spanish Nationalists, already strongly under the Italian thumb, should be the first to realize.

In some quarters argument for the recognition of Nationalist Spain by the United States is being raised. Even if there were no other reasons for regarding such a step as questionable, Gen. Franco would now have given cause for doubt. His ardent indorsement of Germany's latest aggression makes his own independence suspect, and warns us that recognition of his fascist-supported government would, at the moment, be highly premature.

A Hard Place To Fill

Although it is his knowledge of the law that makes William O. Douglas a suitable candidate for the position of associate justice of the Supreme Court, his excellent record as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission is largely responsible for the favorable reception accorded the announcement of his selection. Many members of the financial community who were dismayed at the news of Mr. Douglas' accession to the SEC chairmanship are now regretting the loss of a rather stern but fair-minded taskmaster who has had to deal with regulatory problems of peculiar difficulty.

Mr. Douglas is withdrawing, unfortunately, at a rather critical stage in the development of the SEC's work. While notable progress has been made, for instance, in stamping out stock exchange trading abuses, the constructive work of building up the New York Stock Exchange as a center of investment activities and an agency for facilitating flotation of new capital issues remains to be done.

Relations between stock exchange spokesmen and the SEC are at present somewhat strained as a result of the brusque and emphatic condemnation by Mr. Douglas of certain proposed modifications of the securities acts. His successor will not only have to grapple with revisionist proposals of this sort, but he will be called upon to administer the controversial provisions of the public utility act requiring simplification of holding company structures.

For such reasons, the choice of a successor to Mr. Douglas is a matter of great importance not only to those groups directly affected by the securities acts but to the entire country. While expert knowledge of the intricate problems of regulation that come before the SEC is greatly to be desired, it is less indispensable than a judicial temperament.

The necessary knowledge can be acquired, whereas the qualities that enable an administrator to regulate without destroying, and to execute reforms without overturning the existing order of things are inherent. An administrator of this type will not be easy to find, but the quest is certainly not hopeless.

So far the SEC has been most fortunate in having chairmen who in their several ways have demonstrated an exceptional capacity for making reform palatable to those subjected to a new kind of regulatory discipline.

Vital Challenge

It is a mistake to assume that the policy of appeasement began with Neville Chamberlain. In the case of Great Britain's relations with the Nazi regime it goes back to June, 1935, when the British government, without consulting France, concluded a naval agreement under which the Reich was permitted to build a fleet in excess of Versailles Treaty restrictions but limited to 35 per cent of Britain's total tonnage.

That agreement brought into being a prolonged period of coolness in Anglo-French relations, a circumstance which helps to explain why the League's program of sanctions against Italy, when that country embarked on her Ethiopian venture, was both belated and inadequate. But the British could take comfort in the fact that the agreement with Berlin at least prevented another race in naval armaments.

Recently, the Nazi government, making use of an escape clause in the Anglo-German naval treaty, as it had a right to do, announced intention to build the German submarine fleet up to 100 per cent of British submarine tonnage. Since the action was entirely legal, the Chamberlain government had no cause to complain. Nonetheless the development produced perturbation in London. As an offset, an increase in British destroyer tonnage was at once decided on.

Now Great Britain faces the possibility that the 1935 treaty will be scrapped by Germany altogether. A communique issued this week by the German foreign office declares that the naval pact and the amity pact, concluded at Munich by Chamberlain and Hitler, are interlocking commitments in spirit. If one is no longer valid the other also becomes nullified. The plain implication is that Germany is contemplating resuming freedom of action in naval matters.

It happens that the 1935 agreement cannot be abrogated without the consent of both parties. But in view of what has been happening lately, little trust can be placed in this barrier. If Germany decides that it is to her interests to build a fleet far in excess of present treaty limits, there is no reason to believe she will not do so.

Thus, at a moment when Germany is openly seeking mastery on the continent, she appears to be contemplating an effort for mastery of the seas as well. And if Hitler actually does embark on unrestricted naval construction, the present threat to British security will be very considerably increased.

Nor, for that matter, could any of the dominions, or the United States, view such action by the Third Reich without real alarm. For large-scale German naval expansion would definitely indicate that the bid for power is not to be confined to the continent of Europe alone.

Already, as a result of the crisis arising out of the destruction of Czecho-Slovakia, Canada and Australia have announced that they are determined to stand by the mother country if she is attacked. The naval threat from Berlin is certain to intensify this co-operative attitude both in Ottawa and Canberra and also bring the support of those parts of the British Commonwealth of Nations which thus far have not fully committed themselves. The German threat is having the effect of drawing Great Britain and the dominions very much closer together.

A Reasonable Request

The President's request for abolition of the present limitation of $30,000,000,000 upon the amount of outstanding bonds should be promptly approved by Congress. Otherwise, the Treasury will soon have to rely exclusively upon short term issues to cover its needs, as it is expected that the statutory maximum for bond issues will be reached by the beginning of September. Thereafter sales of all bonds, including the so-called baby bonds, would have to be suspended. And of course the refunding of outstanding short term debt into long term issues would be impossible.

United States Savings bonds or baby bonds are becoming increasingly popular as a form of investment among persons of limited income. This growing bona fide investment demand for Government issues should be encouraged by all legitimate means for the credit of a borrowing government is much more secure as a rule when a large proportion of the people hold its obligations and are interested in maintaining its solvency than is the case if its issues are concentrated in the portfolios of banks and investment institutions.

It is also desirable to reduce the volume of short term debt to more manageable proportions as rapidly as possible. When large amounts of Government issues are subject to payment at frequent intervals, the Treasury's financing operations are made more difficult. Through refunding, Secretary Morgenthau has succeeded in cutting down the proportion of outstanding short term debt during the past few years.

Nevertheless, these issues still constitute approximately 30 per cent of the total amount of outstanding debt as contrasted with less than 10 per cent at the beginning of 1927. And it should be noted that the proportion of short term debt is today but slightly below what it was at the close of the war following the issuance of the victory notes of 1919.

"Regrettable Incident"

Resort to force is always out of place in legislative halls. Even under strong provocation those elected to represent the people in Congress ought to be able to control their emotions, and their hands. It is obvious, however, that all the blame for the slap administered to a WPA lobbyist in a House corridor on Monday does not fall upon Representative Cox.

"The whole incident," said David Lasser, president of the Workers' Alliance, "is regrettable." There will be general agreement on that point. And the impertinent pressure tactics which a representative of Mr. Lasser's organization is reported to have used are by no means the least regrettable aspect of the incident. Representative Cox had good reason to resent this crude effort to dictate his vote on the President's request for a second deficiency appropriation of $150,000,000 for the WPA.

No doubt many Congressmen have been inclined to react as Mr. Cox did when relief workers, drawing substantial benefits from the Federal Treasury, gang up to threaten political reprisals if essential economies are voted. Their habitual patience with this vicious form of pressure politics is commendable. It is time to ask, however, whether something should not be done to end the practice at its roots.

The Workers' Alliance is polling 3,000,000 WPA employes on the question of whether it should sponsor a "march on Washington." Such a utilization of funds paid to WPA workers on the assumption that they are desperately in need of food, clothing and shelter would be an outrage. The one argument for the project is that, probably more than anything else, it would hasten the end of WPA.

The root of the trouble lies in the existence of an organization which preys upon relief workers under the pretense that it is able to secure for them more benefits from the public treasury. Of course, Congress would not want to restrict the right of WPA workers freely to organize. But it might reasonably forbid the use of Federal relief benefits or WPA wages for the support of lobbying organizations. And it most certainly should protect relief workers from the unscrupulous politicians who take a further cut from their earnings. Should the slap administered by Mr. Cox stimulate action along these lines, it will carry far more balm than sting.

Classroom To Bench

The fact that Dean Wiley Blount Rutledge, jr., of the University of Iowa Law School, had strong backing for appointment to the Supreme Court makes his nomination to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia the more significant. The President had two judicial posts of great importance to fill. Having awarded the highest honor to William O. Douglas, he assigned Dean Rutledge to the tribunal which stands next in importance to the Supreme Court.

Washington is not so well acquainted with the Iowa dean as it is with the Yale professor who has been named to the highest bench. But the former has made an impressive record as a student of the law, as an apostle of democracy, as an educator and as a philosopher in political science. Undoubtedly he will give to the Court of Appeals the same devoted and brilliant service that he has given to the University of Iowa and other institutions of legal instruction.

It is especially worthy of note that in making his last three high judicial appointments President Roosevelt has selected outstanding legal educators. This fact suggests that the White House is giving more thoughtful attention to the filling of judicial vacancies than it has sometimes done in the past. In part at least this trend may be due to the influence of Attorney General Murphy, who is known to be keenly interested in improving the quality of jurists chosen for service on the Federal bench.

Whatever the source of this emphasis upon expert legal training for judicial nominees, it is a salutary trend. Residents of Washington in particular hope that these commendable precedents will be followed in filling the remaining post on the United States District Court here. In this case, moreover, there is reason to ask that the new judge be a highly competent member of the District bar.

"By nature, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain is optimistic," declares a writer. Then why does he carry an umbrella?

"Listening to the radio will cure the toothache," declares a psychologist. Another cure is to have the tooth pulled.

Single Tax In Antipodes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Any of our antipodal cousins listening in on the wrangle over what further variety of taxes shall be inflicted upon disfranchised Washington must marvel to hear such loudly professed liberty lovers debating a choice in the pilfering instead of protesting each and every proposal as an invasion of private rights and a detriment to business progress and peace of mind.

Down there they have long had local option in taxation. The result is that taxation of land values as a main or sole source of public revenues is on the spread all over Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. Leading cities such as Sidney and Johannesburg have no other tax of consequence, so that business moves freely, building is encouraged, there are no slums, and the expense of administration is at a minimum. In the recently established District and City of Canberra, capital of Australia, and in the Province of Northern Nigeria, Africa, land speculation is out to stay, as the lands are public property to be had for private use only on government rentals taken in lieu of taxes. Land-value taxation is not an invasion of private property rights, as it takes for community use only community-made values.

If we superior Americans would rest now and then from contemplation of our greatness and sagacity to look into details of what is doing in some less pretentious parts of the globe, we might fall upon a means of solving our farm, unemployment, housing and other pressing problems without turning Government into an eleemosynary institution.

Arrests Without Warrant

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Let's all take our hats off to the gentlemen of the District Bar Association and also Mr. Arthur L. Sellers, of Hatboro, Pa., for their efforts in behalf of the citizens of Washington in trying to clip the wings of the police.

It is time for a halt to be called on that nefarious practice of jailing citizens without cause nor warrant.

This writer has personally seen a policeman arrest a man who was attending strictly to his own business in a restaurant, call the wagon and then lodge him in jail and place a charge of drunkenness against him and I personally know that he had not had a single drink. Despite this fact he was kept in jail all night and bail was refused at the station because they said that he had a drunk charge against him and a drunk had no business to be out.

Democracy Or Republic?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

This message comes to you from the site of the Battle of Germantown. You are aware, of course, of the high foreign propaganda again behind the constant pounding of the words: "This democracy," "these democracies" and "democracy."

Woodrow Wilson started the use of this misnomer, "democracy," and took us into war. We republicans, out of habit, have been repeating it ever since, and incidentally, advertising the Democratic Party and now the New Deal. Let us stop it.

All of the people of America do not assemble together and make their own laws. Our laws are made by our chosen representatives. We are a republic. Where did our Republican Party get its name? What does our pledge to our flag say? Let us go back and start over and call things as of old by their proper names, as "our republic," "our republican form of government," "our republican institutions."

"Let Us Forget These Childish Hatreds"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am not a chronic "protester." I have never before written a letter to the editor of any newspaper or publication. Since I have been able to form my own judgments, I have been a disciple of Voltaire: "I may heartily disagree with another's views but will fight to the death his right to entertain them." And, being an adult, I am accustomed to disillusionment. But I have recently observed a phenomenon which, to me at least, is shocking.

Much has been said of the dangers which threaten our country both from without and within. I do not believe in getting hysterical about these dangers; neither do I believe in disregarding them.

I am, I suppose (if we must so designate), a "Northerner." Having spent all my life, until about a year ago, above the Mason-Dixon line, I was entirely unprepared for the bitterness which I have met so often in and about Washington. Perhaps if the North had been ravaged as the South was, during and after the War Between the States, that feeling would prevail there, as well.

As it is, people in the North rarely think about that war now, except to regard it as a dark blot upon our national history. If it is discussed in any intelligent group, it is objectively and with due regard for the consciences of both sides. In the North, Sherman's march to the sea is considered a ruthless and inexcusable thing. But all war is ruthless and inexcusable and the burden of victory is as frightful as the burden of defeat.

Recently I was in a local theater where the picture of the American flag was flashed on the screen, together with the words of "The Star-Spangled Banner." I noticed a number of people in the audience who remained seated. Later, a short feature of President Lincoln was apparently deemed an occasion for levity. Both Mr. Lincoln and the American flag were booed and hissed; but when the gray uniforms of the Confederate troops and the Confederate flag were shown, there was cheering and clapping. Now I confess that my heart fairly bled at this demonstration and it has been heavy ever since.

Are we not, as Americans, bigger than old hatreds? Surely it is our duty to strive to forget them. It is destructive and even adolescent to do anything else. If these people really love the South, they have a queer way of showing it. Wise love looks to the future and builds; it does not waste its energy brooding over things that are past and which cannot now be changed.

For those who abuse my country's liberties and exploit its heritage, I have only a deep and undying hatred. But they have nothing to do with the American ideal. That ideal is as pure today as it ever was: " . . . conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal." Throughout our history, there have been those who have sought deliberately to corrupt or destroy that ideal; and then there have been those too little in their own minds to see that in it lies the hope of mankind.

For the love of all that we are or hope to be as a Nation, let us forget these childish hatreds; let us put our country first. We are one people. As a people, let us have dignity.

Program For Congress

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

If the Seventy-sixth Congress wishes to make a good record it will:

1—Stop supporting the Dies Un-American Committee.

2—Return relief administration to the States.

3—Regain control of the public purse.

4—Balance the Federal budget, instead of merely talking about it.

5—Cut expenditures to the marrow.

6—Throw the National Labor Relations Board in the junk heap. Amend the Wagner act to make it fair to all.

7—Scrap both the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. and labor racketeers, for they are directly responsible for choking business, untold millions of unemployed.

8—Induce Secretary Perkins to resign.

9—Send the Corcoran-Cohen boys back to their desks.

10—Stop the "bleeding" of business by social security taxes and put that law on a fair basis.

11—Enact sensible laws and quick necessary measures toward relieving railroads of their complicated troubles and place railways on a more equable basis with other transportation "ways."

12—Make adequate, but not too extravagant or hysterical appropriations for national defense.

13—Revise the undistributed profits and other taxes affecting business men.

14—Last, but by no means least, make a real start toward a return from the great swamp of bureaucracy to the light of day. If those who comprise the present Congress accomplish these objectives, they could go right back to the folks they are said to represent, knowing full well they have accomplished much.

Good Work By The ADA

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In the Congressional Record of March 8 appeared a long tirade against the United States Housing Authority by Senator Tydings of Maryland, in which the cost of the projects now under construction by that authority are held to be excessively high.

The Senator quotes the estimated cost of the family units as authorized for the District of Columbia (U. S. H. A. Projects). What I would like to know is if the Senator, by any chance, ever heard of the Alley Dwelling Authority?

From my observation of the work of the ADA, its program has been conducted along strictly business lines and has demonstrated that slum clearance can be accomplished without costing the taxpayers one single dollar.

Thus the Alley Dwelling Authority under the executive direction of John Ihlder, although having demonstrated with a very limited sum of money that it could effect slum clearance in a progressively rapid manner, if Congress would grant to it a loan of $1,000,000 a year for five years was refused the grant by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Here is one of the New Deal agencies which has proven itself so highly efficient that genuine statesmanship would acclaim it, instead of erecting hurdles in its path.

It is difficult to imagine that the United States Senate does not know the record of the Alley Dwelling Authority. If it does know it why then the refusal to grant it the necessary loan to continue its splendid work along more comprehensive lines? THOS. H. R. CLARKE.

The Post Impressionist

Dream House

"I brought you something," said Mr. Trainum.

"Um, thanks," Mrs. Trainum answered.

"Are you more interested in sewing up that stocking, or are you going to look and see what it is?"

"Can't look right now." She frowned and jammed her needle through a knot. "Why don't you tell me?"

"Guess you don't really care, or you'd look. Here it is on the table. I'm going to see what's in the icebox."

"Don't, Henry, I'll get you something to eat in a minute. I'm afraid you'll eat up the meat loaf I made for lunch tomorrow."

"You'd better come on, then."

"Oh, all right. I'm through now, anyway. What is it you've got for me?"

"I decided you didn't want it so I took it away."

"I know, you've got it right behind your back. Don't tease, Henry—I'm devoured with curiosity. I can't stand it!"

"It's that book of One Hundred Small Homes you wanted. Now what's it worth to you?"

"Darling!"

"That's more like it. Say, while I wasn't doing anything at the office today I drew a plan of my own—thought it would be just perfect for our needs. All these in the book are O. K., of course, but the guy who figured 'em out had to find a common denominator, so to speak. He couldn't have had you and me in mind, if you get what I mean. So I drew one just for us.

"I guess I didn't bring home a copy of it," he said after shaking the book thoroughly. "Look, I'll lay it out for you over again."

"No, not a clean piece, Henry. Use the back of this letter."

"I should think for anything as—oh, well. Now see, this big central portion is the living room. Fifteen by thirty."

"That's a beautiful big living room, darling."

"And in this wing we have the two bedrooms, with the bathroom between. This little hall leading from the living room gives all the privacy you could want and the easiest access without any waste space. In the opposite wing are the dining room — here — the kitchen back of it, with the butler's pantry between——"

"Why, that's grand, darling, but we don't need a butler's pantry. It just makes it farther from the kitchen to the dining room. Why don't we just leave out the pantry, and run the kitchen and dining room alongside each other. We could save all that space."

"But we don't want to save space. What do we want to save for? If you take out the butler's pantry it destroys symmetry."

"I know, darling. You're very clever about those things, and I don't know much about it. It's a beautiful plan, it really is. But——"

"But you don't like it. All right. You don't like it."

"But I do like it. I just finished telling you, darling, its beautiful. Only——"

"Only it isn't any good."

"It is good, Henry, it's just that—look, I have an idea. Why don't we put the dining room in the middle of this wing, and in front we can have a den for you. That would keep the shape perfect, and——"

"I believe you have got something," said Mr. Trainum, somewhat mollified. "Only I wouldn't want a den in the front where everybody would be looking in the window all the time. It would have to be a library."

"Call it the library, then," Mrs. Trainum acquiesced, "and you could have your den somewhere else."

"That would be all right."

"You could add on a little room back here," suggested Mrs. Trainum.

"But I don't want to add on a little room, it would get everything out of shape. That's what we're trying to do, isn't it, preserve the symmetry of the house?"

"If that's what you say, Henry, I know you're right."

"Well, I can have my den down the basement."

"Before we get it all settled, Henry, there's one other little thing."

Mr. Trainum groaned. "All right, let's have it."

"That's a beautiful big living room, Henry, but don't you think it might be hard to heat?"

"I don't see why, if the walls are insulated."

"It would be suitable to Florida, or some warm place, dear, but in this climate they build most of them on the corner, like this." She indicated the wing.

"But that exposes just as much, unless you make the room smaller, and you could do that in the case of the one I drew."

"Well, couldn't we, Henry? Just a little bit smaller?"

"What do you want to make it smaller for? That big living room is the chief beauty of the house. That's the main thing I drew it for."

"I thought—just a wee bit—so it would be easier to furnish——"

"What's the use of having a house if you can't have the kind of house you want?" Mr. Trainum raised his voice.

"Of course, the kind we want—that's . . . why——"

"Oh, now, look here, darling, I didn't mean to hurt your feelings. Take my handkerchief. Look, I tell you what we'll do. We'll make the living room 25 feet instead of 30, and we'll turn it around so the long sides are inside."

Mrs. Trainum smiled through her tears, which already had ceased to flow. "Why, that'll fix everything, darling. You're so smart—I never think of things like that. I think it's a perfectly lovely plan, and I wish we could build a house, just so we could build that one."

"Maybe by 1942 . . ." said Mr. Trainum.

Historic Facts

EXCEPT in the Hitleresque method of Father Coughlin himself I have encountered on the home controversial front nothing quite as raw and ignoble as the excuse offered by one who signs himself Miall Oran Meagher for falsely attributing to these dispatches matter which did not appear in them so that he could resent imaginary affronts to Americans of Irish blood. Mr. Meagher faked the offenses, and when his lies were nailed explained that an inexperienced typist erroneously placed quotation marks around certain phrases, indicating that they were direct quotations from these dispatches. But I stand on the fact that he did use the quotation marks. If he had wanted to use the exact language he could have done so. It was not necessary to resort to distorted interpretation.

The story in question proposed that it was particularly unbecoming of Father Coughlin to incite bigotry, not only because he is an American and a priest, but also because Irish immigrants to this country in the last century—from whom we sprang—were hated and persecuted for their religion and blood. Mr. Meagher takes the attitude that they were not and tries to create the impression that citation of historical truths known to every American born of Irish Catholic immigrants of the last century denotes approval of that hatred and persecution. It indicates nothing of the kind, and his insinuation that it does is as insincere as his fakery was false.

Bigoted Persecution Of Catholics Cited

AS TO WHETHER they were hated and persecuted, let us look at the record. He says by way of disproof that President Grant sent a destroyer to greet returning Fenians, just liberated from English jails in 1871, and quotes from a tribute of welcome by Jonathan P. Dolliver, a native American orator. I distrust quotes offered by Mr. Meagher, but will concede that Dolliver spoke as he is said to have spoken. But as proof that he did not express the prevailing sentiment of native Americans, I quote from a Catholic historical book, "Has the Emigrant Kept the Faith?" by Gerald O'Shaughnessy, former professor of theology, Marist College, Washington, D. C., and Notre Dame Seminary, New Orleans, published in 1925.

"While this Catholic immigration was entering the country," Mr. O'Shaughnessy writes, "it was greeted by growing hostility to foreigners and Irish Catholics, which crystallized in the infamous Know Nothing slogan, 'America for American Protestants.' Its effect was manifest throughout the country in bigoted persecution of Catholic pupils, in 'nunnery inspection' laws and in mob violence in which churches were burned and Calholics assaulted and murdered. In some States hampering property laws were enacted."

Even Churches Were Destroyed

THIS CATHOLIC historian recalls riots, often with destruction of churches, in Providence, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Dorchester, Roxbury, Charlestown, Lawrence, Chelsea, Manchester, Bath, Norwalk, Brooklyn, Saugerties, Palmyra, in Sidney and Massillon, Ohio, and Galveston. He says that election day, 1855, in Louisville, was known as bloody Monday because of Know Nothing violence.

So who gave the more convincing testimony of the feeling of native Americans toward the immigrants from whom Father Coughlin sprang, the orator or the rioters? In view of this testimony is it an exaggeration to say that employers openly discriminated against Irish Catholic immigrants under the insulting catch line "No Irish Need Apply?" Is it an exaggeration to say that they were hated, even despised?

Philadelphia Riots Of 1844 Recalled

I SAID they did not readily take to farming, but congregated in Eastern cities. Meagher cites a figure, without basis of comparison, showing that many Irish farmers settled in California, but O'Shaughnessy says: "The vast majority of our immigrants from whom has been drawn the greatest portion of our Catholic increase during the (nineteenth) century have shown a general and continued disposition to settle in large centers." It is not aspersion to say that the Irish immigrants preferred urban to rural life. The United States was then and—small thanks to Father Coughlin—still is a free country.

"Catholicity in Philadelphia," a Catholic reference book, describes the terrible riots, church burnings and desecrations in the Kensington district of Philadelphia in May, 1844, in which 40 were killed and 60 seriously wounded, and shows that the Irish Catholics were attacked because hatred had been fomented by false or cunningly distorted attributions like those which Father Coughlin and others now circulate against the Jews.

I submit that history and truth have pinned Mr. Meagher's ears back.

Neutrality And Peace

By Livingston Hartley

Should The Law Be Amended?

Special Correspondence of The Post.

ONCE AGAIN a battle over neutrality looms in the Senate, as the expiration date of the "cash and carry" provisions of the act of 1937 approaches. That there will be a battle seems certain, and that it will bring changes in the law seems likely, since our experience during the last two years appears to have shown that the act has been damaging to American interests, and more harmful than beneficial to peace.

During these two years, according to the findings of the Gallup Polls, public opinion has evolved to a point where a majority of our people now favor furnishing the Atlantic democracies in a European war with the munitions and airplanes which the act would deny them.

But this neutrality question has been clouded by our tendency to view the act of 1937 as either wholly good or wholly bad. Its partisans still praise it, despite its record, as a panacea for all war dangers which needs only to be made more mandatory and restrictive to become war-proof. Its opponents condemn it as a stupid, damaging and dangerous piece of legislation. Yet when we scrutinize it in terms of specific provisions instead of generalities, neither of these extreme views seem justified.

OUR PROBLEM as a neutral has two separate faces. One of these is turned outward toward American activities conducted outside the United States. The other is turned inward upon legislative measures adopted by our Government and enforced within its territorial jurisdiction.

What Americans do beyond our borders during a major overseas war can raise obvious dangers to our neutrality. If they travel on belligerent vessels within the range of hostile submarines or aircraft they are liable to be attacked and killed. And if American ships carry munitions or essential war materials to belligerents, they will run the risk of being torpedoed.

We know from our World War experience where "incidents" of this nature, involving the loss of American citizens or ships, can lead.

Every Path Strewn With Grave Dangers

WHAT WE do inside the United States cannot create similar dangers. Whatever we do here in legal restrictions on trade with belligerents, in discriminatory economic assistance to one group, or in selling one group munitions delivered to their shippers in our own ports, cannot produce any comparable "incidents."

However far we go in these activities, no foreign power has the physical means to prevent them by forceful action; it can only protest and threaten. Active danger to our neutrality could only arise from this situation if a foreign belligerent were prepared to declare war upon the United States, and there need be little fear that any foreign belligerent, fighting already for its life abroad, will do that.

FROM A practical standpoint, therefore, it looks as if we can safely do what we wish as a neutral inside our 3-mile limit, provided that we exercise strict control over American activities outside this limit. Relating this conclusion to our existing legislation, it is evident where the valuable and wise features of this legislation are. These are to be found in the provisions preventing American ships from carrying munitions or essential war materials to belligerents, prohibiting American ships from carrying defensive armaments, restricting the travel of American citizens on belligerents' vessels, and governing the use belligerents may make of American ports.

There appears no valid reason, on the other hand, why the provisions of the act relating to what our Government may do within its borders should not be changed, if changes in these provisions would further the purpose of the act. This, it should be stressed, is not limited to the preservation of our own peaceful status. A co-equal objective, according to the text of the law, is "to promote the security of the United States."

FEW AMERICANS today would deny the fact that a basic element in our national and hemisphere security is the control of the other side of the Atlantic Ocean by friendly powers with whom we have no fear of conflict. This is the situation we enjoy, under existing conditions, when the British and French navies lie between us and a yearly more dangerous Europe and enable us to feel quite safe when our own fleet is concentrated in the far Pacific, nearly 5,000 miles from New York. It seems obvious that the preservation of this situation will directly promote our security. If, therefore, we can preserve it by neutrality laws which will be applied within our own borders beyond the physical reach of any foreign belligerents, and which cannot, due to our paramount power, entail any real danger of war, it is common sense to do so.

Possible Changes In Act Are Suggested

A CHANGE in the act which would promote our security directly and effectively is a section of the proposed Thomas amendment. This would authorize the President, acting with the consent of Congress, to exempt nations attacked in violation of a treaty to which we are a party from such provisions of the act as were advisable. Another section of the Thomas amendment would make it possible to apply our neutrality laws to the Pacific without prejudicing our own interests, by permitting the President to embargo exports of essential war materials to belligerents.

If we continue to disregard our Pacific interests as Congress did in framing the present neutrality act, two less extensive measures would be valuable safeguards of our Atlantic security. The most effective of these would be a change in the present law making the prohibition of munition and airplane exports to belligerents discretionary instead of mandatory.

Less effective, but of undoubted value, would be the exemption of our North American neighbor, Canada, from the provisions of the act. We really go beyond the verge of the fantastic in endeavoring to conjure up danger to our people from supplying Canada with anything she needs. Even the most modern submarines cannot torpedo trains.

THERE IS reason to believe, furthermore, that more than our security will be promoted by such changes. The other objective of the act, "the peace of the United States," appears now to be closely related to the continuance of peace among the European great powers. How our people feel about this was indicated by the Gallup Poll of January 28, which found that 57 per cent of the public believed that we could not stay out of another general European war.

Since such a war can best be averted if the dictators are made to feel that they cannot win, and since their prospects of victory must be largely influenced by the great economic and industrial power of the United States, what we do about our neutrality law now may make or break peace in Europe. If we make changes now which appear to enhance the defensive power of the transatlantic democracies, we will contribute directly and powerfully to European peace, and hence to our own peace. But should the result of the neutrality battle be even more restrictive and mandatory legislation, the proponents of this legislation in Congress will bear an awful responsibility if war subsequently flames abroad and draws America into the conflagration.

There appears no compelling reason why we should not maintain existing restrictions on the activities of American ships and citizens beyond our borders, and a strong case for their maintenance. But we should so amend the internal features of the present act that it will promote, not imperil, its twin objectives of American security and American peace.

Neutrality Act

By Ernest K. Lindley

SENATOR PITTMAN'S new substitute for the existing neutrality act is considerably less than the Administration would like to have. Unquestionably the President would like to have the broadest possible discretion in using such economic weapons as embargoes to discriminate against some nations and to favor others.

It is extremely doubtful whether Congress will give him more discretion than he now has. The fear of involvement in war abroad is profound. Popular opinion seems to be more favorable to a strong "anti-dictator" policy than it was six months or a year ago. But many members of Congress undoubtedly fear that if given a free hand the President would be too venturesome, and some of them are extremely uneasy over the extent to which we are already tied up in a so-called "democratic front" against Germany.

Senator Pittman himself is one of the most bellicose men in Congress. Judging from his speeches, he is aching to have us fight somebody—Japan or Germany, or both, with Italy thrown in. But as an astute politician he has drafted a neutrality bill which accepts the main structure of the existing law, thereby skirting around the controversial question of giving the President greater discretion.

'Cash-Carry' Plan Would Favor Japan

Senator Pittman himself is one important proposal is to put munitions on the same basis as other exportable commodities. Under the existing law the export of munitions to belligerents is prohibited whenever there occurs abroad anything that the President recognizes as a war or as a civil war. Materials which do not fall under the heading of munitions can be exported, although they must be paid for in cash, and the President can require that the purchasers take title at the seaboard, and haul them away in their own ships.

The "cash and carry" plan favors the nations which have (1) the cash and (2) control of the sea routes between themselves and the United States. In Europe it favors Great Britain and her allies. In the Far East it favors Japan. The purpose behind the device was not, however, to favor any nation, except the United States. Its purpose was to help to keep the United States from being sucked into another war in Europe in the manner of 1917.

Senator Pittman proposes to remove the mandatory embargo on the export of munitions and to put munitions and other commodities on a "cash and carry" basis. The main purpose is, of course, to make munitions available to Great Britain and France and their allies in the event of war. More particularly, I think, to enable them to continue to buy airplanes in this country.

Existing Law Allows Exports Of Trucks

FOR AIRPLANES—whether for commercial or avowedly for military purposes—are classed under the general heading of "arms, ammunition, or implements of war," which cannot be exported, under existing law, to a nation at war.

Trucks, on the other hand, are not classified as "arms, ammunition or implements of war." Neither are many other manufactured articles which armies need and which we can supply. Neither are oil, cotton, copper and all other raw materials used in wartime. Neither are foodstuffs, which are just as vital as munitions, to the maintenance of a war.

The distinctions are rather artificial. It is hard to explain why we should export trucks and copper and oil, but not airplanes and anti-aircraft guns. There is no more and no less danger of entanglement in a war through selling trucks to the British and the French than through selling them airplanes.

The danger is not in the particular items, but in the volume of our exports. In 1915 and 1916 British and French purchases in this country produced a war boom. These were cash purchases at first, but as their cash began to run low, the British and French asked for credits, then long-term loans. Mr. Wilson had to face the choice of letting them buy on borrowed money or of curtailing exports and thus precipitating a depression.

Allies Have Large Purchasing Power

THE BRITISH and their friends have more potential cash purchasing power in the United States than they had in 1914. It is in the form of bank balances, investments in American securities and direct investments in American enterprises. Moreover, we are continuing to take all the gold that is offered—at a much higher price than in 1914-1917.

The British and their friends could give us a fairly healthy war boom. Maybe we will decide it's to our national interest to let them buy all they can pay for—or even to lend them money again. But those are matters which we alone should decide. The neutrality act should be amended to enable our Government to control the rate at which foreign purchasing power in this country is used. If that is done there won't be any danger in permitting airplanes and other implements of war to be sold on the same "cash and carry" basic terms as trucks, cotton and copper.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

The Economic Weapon

THE DECISION of the United States to raise the duties on German goods by 25 per cent was not wholly a political gesture, although its timing was undoubtedly motivated by the wanton seizure of Czecho-Slovakia by the Nazi government.

Nevertheless both the State and Treasury departments had reached the conclusion two months ago that, under the mandatory provisions of section 303 of the tariff act, countervailing duties would have to be put on against Germany.

This section provides that if any country pays a subsidy on exports to the United States which might circumvent the established tariff we must apply a countervailing duty.

The tariff act was passed in 1930, at a time when the methods of doing business in this world were relatively simple.

Today they are incredibly complicated, and it is far from simple to determine what is a subsidy.

Treasury Accepted Nazi Recommendations

MANY MONTHS ago the Treasury Department applied counter-duties to ten German commodities. When this happened Germany sent a commission over to investigate, and as a result of their findings made certain changes which the Treasury accepted.

Under the terms of the agreement reached then the American exporter could sell abroad, get German marks, buy goods with them and bring those goods into this country.

As a result of the agreement the import of German goods considerably increased, and complaints were made to Washington that the procedure continued to involve a violation of the tariff act.

Again the Treasury made a study and decided that what was being done differed from what had been agreed upon.

Fully three months ago the State Department had reached the conclusion that section 303 was still being violated, and two months ago the Attorney General reached the same conclusion.

But action was delayed, and had it not been for the Czech coup there is no question that this country would have given the German government time to make adjustments.

Economic Weapon Is Effective Force

BUT WHEN the German government seized Czecho-Slovakia, and when we saw that $165,000,000 of Czech debts to the United States were no doubt going the same way that the $25,000,000 Austrian debt has gone; when the Nazi government committeed nothing more nor less than a prodigious bank robbery, transferring 18 truckloads of gold out of the central bank of a sovereign state, the United States decided to clamp the duties on immediately.

The economic weapon really wielded in the hands of the world democracies would be an enormously effective force against the present German government.

It might easily be the absolutely decisive force. But if it is to be effective it should be swift and comprehensive. And the difficulty of making it effective is the difficulty of collaboration.

It becomes increasingly clear even to Mr. Chamberlain and the Daladier-Bonnet government in France that the world today is faced by only three alternatives.

Periodic Protests Won't Stop Aggression

THE FIRST is that Germany, Italy and Japan, who are now in the most perfect strategical position and who prusue their way without the slightest regard for any agreements, using revolution, trade squeeze, war, enormous propaganda, espionage and all the implements of war in time of so-called peace, will meet nothing more than periodic protests and will gradually take over the control of most of this earth.

The second is that at some point this process will be checked by war, which, since last week, has a very small chance of being isolated.

The third is that it be made impossible for this regime in Germany to survive, and that it give way to another the world could co-operate to start anew on a basis of equality and justice.

The third would be the cheapest and the best solution for everybody, but it would involve giving no comfort or aid whatsoever to the present regime in Berlin. It would involve the recognition at long last that it is impossible to live in the same world with a regime whose whole tactic is the tactic of the underworld.

Democracy Weakness Is Imagination Lack

THE WEAKNESS of the democracies is their lack of imagination and the belief of certain people in the democracies that they can have the best of both worlds.

Thus representatives of the British industries have, up to the very explosion of last week, been conferring in Dusseldorf with the representatives of Nazi industries, and on the very eve of the rape of Czecho-Slovakia had reached an agreement that Germany and England would co-operate along cartel lines to create more trade with each other, and if the exports of outside countries interfered with their plans they were prepared to consult with their own governments and ask for aid.

This was all in harmony with the appeasement program of Mr. Chamberlain, and may have been partially responsible for the happy optimism that pervaded certain sections of Wall street just before the Nazi government broke loose again.

The conclusion reached by the British and German industrialists comprised some ten paragraphs of a declaration, the sense of which was that they agreed to minimize competition with each other and bend their efforts to a mutual exploitation of the world market.

For instance, paragraph 8 stated that the two organizations realize that in certain cases the advantages of an agreement between the industries of the two countries—or of a group of countries—may be nullified by competition from industry in some other country that might refuse to become a party to the agreement, and that in such circumstances it might be necessary for the organization to obtain the help of their governments, and that the two organizations agreed to collaborate in seeking such help.

British Might Help Nazis in Brazil

UNDER THE TRADE treaty with the United States the British government cannot give any concessions to Germany in the empire market that she does not give to us, but had this agreement gone into effect the Germans might very well have developed their trade in Brazil, for instance, in agreement with Britain and with British financial aid.

The real dilemma of the Chamberlain government is that it is to a very large extent dominated by British financial and industrial interests and that these interests are suffering from a certain myopia, which makes it difficult for them to see clearly the exact state of affairs in the world.

The German financial and industrial interests are a complete instrument of the Nazi national policy and completely under the control of that policy.

But the financial and industrial interests of the democracies have divided allegiances.

The result of last week's political events has been that this agreement is off, but it is by no means out of the question that if quiet settles down temporarily on the European front these negotiations will be resumed.

It is, indeed, somewhat difficult to understand why the British and French governments should have been so suddenly appalled at what is happening in central Europe. After all, it was obvious, and it was indeed agreed upon, that Munich meant for Germany a free hand in the east, and there is nothing whatever new about the Nazi method of using that free hand.

British Must Play Ball To Get U. S. Support

IT IS QUITE impossible to believe that the British government should be less able to foresee the inevitable outcome of Munich for Czecho-Slovakia than a columnist writing in New York.

I am inclined to think that what has really horrified the British is the realization that Mr. Hitler is not striking directly east at Russia but is striking southeast through Rumania, toward the Black Sea and the Dardanelles, where he can meet Mussolini's navy. His route is maybe east—but east toward Iraq, Arabia and India.

This column has always been in favor of the United States having a very active foreign policy, in the complete conviction that it will be impossible for us in the long run to isolate ourselves from the European situation.

But I do not believe that the United States should give its support for nothing or tag along after other countries, but rather make it clear that if it is in this game it wishes to be consulted at every step of the game and not be regarded as the rich uncle who pays the others' gambling debts.

Senate Gets Federal Education Aid Bill

The Federal aid to education bill, providing for a co-operative five-year program of education between the Government, States and Territories, was reported favorably to the Senate yesterday by the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

Sponsored by Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, the measure provides for a Federal appropriation of $70,000,000 for the first year, which would then be increased to $208,000,000 for the remaining four years. The committee also approved a bill by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, authorizing the United States Housing Administration to extend its construction rates in cities to the so-called metropolitan areas.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 14, Has Become 'Wall Flower' of Her Crowd; Miserable and Mortified, She Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 14 years old, a junior in a large high school. My family is well-to-do and my parents well thought of in the city. I am considered quite attractive and am popular with the girls in my own crowd. But here is my problem: Just since fall we have grown, more or less, from juvenile children to the more matured teen-age. The rest of the girls began having dates, each averaging at least one every week-end.

Well, at first I didn't mind, because I kept telling myself that my time would come. Winter came and still no dates for me. It wasn't and isn't that I crave dates, or that I am boy crazy—and above everything I wouldn't have the masculine gender know how I feel. But it is just the fact that I am the wallflower of the crowd. With winter practically over and spring rapidly approaching I have become a little discouraged.

There is a chartered sorority in the city which is taking in new members this week and almost every one of my friends has been asked to join. I haven't been asked. I realize that I have not taken an active part in the activities of the school, but neither have the other girls that are to be future members. It is rather embarrassing and I have suffered many heartaches. Is there anything you could tell me to do? No average high school girl could be more unhappy than I am now.

MISERABLE.

Time for Inventory

DEAR MISERABLE: If all your girl friends are finding favor in the eyes of contemporary-age boys, while you alone are overlooked and neglected, it must mean that both your appearance and your social techniques need overhauling. It is possible that your mother could be an invaluable ally in helping you to regain the ground you have lost. Perhaps your parents have made the mistakes—with the best intentions in the world, of course—of dressing you in a fashion, and holding you to a pattern of behavior, which is operating to your social disadvantage at the moment.

My first suggestion is this: make a point-by-point inventory of yourself, as compared to those girls who have acquired beaux, and who have been invited to join the sorority. Find out where you differ from them—in style and articles of dress; in the use of cosmetics; in the way you wear your hair; in the matter of social accomplishments—such as dancing, skill at sports, conversational ability, ease of manner in the presence of the opposite sex; in the amount of social freedom allowed—such as the privilege of entertaining your friends at home or giving small parties; the size of your weekly or monthly allowance (if any); the places you are permitted to go, etc., etc.

One can only suppose that there is something about habits, appearance and/or manner which labels you, somewhow, as being either a "little girl" as yet; or as being, potentially, an uninteresting young woman. This might be, largely, a matter of the wrong kind of clothes; wrong, that is, in the sense of not being the sort of clothes the other girls are wearing. Maybe these others have blossomed into the subtly effective use of cosmetics; or to rather more distinctive taste and chic in the choice of wearing apparel; clothes, perhaps, which make them look (in the boys, at least) a bit more grown up, worldly and acknowledgeable.

Perhaps you are handicapped by shyness, which is, of course, a confession of failure to keep your personality development apace with your years. Perhaps you act "dumb struck" in the presence of boys, as though they were visitors from Mars! awkward, ill at ease, obviously scared and self-conscious. Perhaps you don't know that the way to get on with boys is to treat them, simply, as friendly human beings—not as baffling mysterious creatures of a bewilderingly different sex.

At your age, you shouldn't treat them one whit differently than you would treat your girl friends. At this age, their interests are essentially your interests—sports, school activities, parties, dancing, having loads of attractive friends and as much recreational fun as can be packed into week-ends and enjoyed in congenial groups. They like, at your age, those girls who are "good fun," pleasant company, amusing or fluent conversationalists, natural in manner, who dress in the accepted mode of the hour, and whose parents are "good sports"—in the sense of allowing their children (and the latter's friends) reasonable social privileges under the family roof.

But to go back to the proposition of the checkup: In addition to developing some constructive conclusions of your own, concerning improvements that need to be made in manner, appearance or social program, get the advice of one or two of your closest girl friends on how to keep up with the crowd. Get their opinion on what ails you, and how your shortcomings can be remedied. They may be mercilessly frank, but they will be as sincere in their efforts to help you as they will be unsparing in listing your defects—once their assistance has been asked. Don't be afraid to admit your desire to escape the fate of a wallflower. Don't be so foolish as to strike the dishonest and defeatist attitude of disdaining boys; of not caring anything about them. Such an attitude would be apt to make your social isolation complete. Be candidly disconsolate, and stanchily determined to profit by your disappointments of the past winter.

Armed with your own ideas and your friends' opinions, talk with your mother and implore her cooperation in getting yourself back on the bandwagon of social acceptance. If you believe your unpopularity with boys is due to lack of skills—at dancing, games, sports; or to lack of social opportunities—such as the privilege of giving parties, having friends call or making calls; or to a certain study "little girlishness" of dress—such as prohibited cosmetics, hair sans permanent, hands sans manicures, costume jewelry or faddish doo-dads denied, give your mother a list of those things you believe would make for greater popularity, more favor in the eyes of boys, and beg of her to see that you are adequately equipped to hold your own with the other girls.

Remember this: No mother wants her daughter to be a wall flower; and the average mother of normal intelligence will co-operate to the fullest with her daughter to rout the specter of such a possiblity. It is possible you have been hugging your misery to your breast for six months longer than you needed to have done; that your winter would have been a normally happy one and that you would have been bid to the sorority this spring, if you had taken your problem to your mother in the beginning.

Billy Rose Finds Pretty Legs Are Rare Says Average Is Only One Pair in 90 Appearance Can Be Improved by Exercise

AFTER interviewing 1,500 girls for his new World's Fair show, it is Billy Rose's conviction that perfect legs are very, very rare. He has found in his experience as a showman that girls of the chorus average about one good pair of legs out of 30, and he hazards the guess that the rest of us would run closer to one pair out of 90!

So we think nobody has told the designers these things, or they wouldn't be setting the official skirt length at any 17-18 inches from the floor. That would appear to be too much clearance for the average pair of legs.

Leg Work in Order

But since they are going right ahead with their skirt raising, it is up to us to do some leg work. While it is true that thin or fat legs seem to run in families, a lack of exercise may be the cause of pronounced skinniness or flabbiness. Adequate leg exercise provides good muscle tone, and unless this muscle tone is present, the legs are particularly affected by either overweight or underweight, and also by either a gain or a loss in weight.

Girls with thin legs can take any kind of exercise to strengthen and develop the leg muscles. Bicycling, rope skipping, dancing and various exercises combine leg contraction with stretching. Any exercises taken on the toes contract the muscles and develop the calf contour. The following exercises are for thin legs:

Stand with the feet parallel and toes pointed straight ahead. Rise on the toes of one foot, and then, as the heel is lowered to the floor, rise on the toes of the other foot. Keep it up!

Here is a combination leg stretching and contracting exercise which gets results: Stand on a stair step with the weight resting on the ball of the foot and the heel off the step. Seesaw up and down on this foot, rising on the toes, holding for a second, then lowering the heel below the step. Do not move the foot off the step. Repeat the exercise six times and then change to the other foot.

A Reducing Exercise

Fat legs require exercises which lengthen and smooth the muscles. In trying to reduce the legs, all exercises should be taken with heels rather than toes pointed. The following exercise is very effective in slimming the legs:

Stand with the legs fairly wide apart and with the right foot forward. Have the right knee bent and the weight resting on that foot. Keep the right foot flat on the floor as you push down with the hand on the right knee and slowly and forcibly increase the bend. As rapidly as possible, intensify the bending action at the knee, always keeping the heel on the floor. You will feel a definite pull on the leg muscles.

Muscularly overdeveloped legs are the most difficult to change. Sometimes it is impossible to make very much improvement. The best method is massage. An expert masseuse tells us it is not worth while to begin massage on the legs unless it can be continued for nine months.

But perhaps your legs are perfect! If so, you are to be congratulated. Perfect measurements vary from an 11¼-inch calf and 7½-inch ankle for the girl of 5 feet in height to a 14-inch calf and 8⅛-inch ankle for the girl of 5 feet 8. Both sets of measurements are for medium build. Underexercised legs are unlikely to conform to these standards.

To Old Friends

I

No, I have not forgotten you,
for in my memory,
Your faces all grow clearer with each passing year,
And, strangely, those of you whom I have missed the longest Take form the more distinct; and often at most unexpected moments
Some one of you by look or voice will suddenly be with me;
And yet some way your presence would be much more welcome
If I could feel you did not come to chide me with hurt glances,
Because my drawer is filled with letters I have failed to answer.

II

I wish you would not go around and say that I'm neglectful
Of friends behind, or send reproachful cards at Christmas Reminding me of how I owe you letters, and insisting
That I write an opus telling all about myself and what I'm doing.
For I am one of those, alack, whose strength must be expended
In beating off the prowling wolf, also the sheriff,
Or else in meeting daily petty needs of those who have priority
Upon my time; Why must you press this added obligation?

III

Is it not true that newer, more pretentious associates,
Have filled my life; alas I find myself more solitary
Than ever in the past; though people crowd my waking hours,
They mostly move as shadows, and I lack the zeal
And faith to venture deeply in the mysteries of new friendships, Nor have I time to cultivate the subtle art of human intimacy;
Old friends were best if they could meet the test of friendship,
Not doubt my loyalty—nor hound me to write them letters.

IV

So many times I think of things that I should like to say
To this or that friend far away;
and often smiles will come
And give me lift of heart, induced by some reminder
Of some bright quip or light
profundity Expressed by someone in the past and then I long to write a letter
And let well out from in my soul the many things
That I've been thinking; and talk over present day confusion
But life intervenes; it leaves no time for gathering threads once broken.

V

And so, dear friends, if our ways never come to a converging,
I want to let you know—although I cannot answer letters—
I will forever carry the imprint of your personalities
Upon myself, and the intangible gifts you gave me,
The thoughts you crystalized, the ideas you helped bring into being
Will always be a part of me, and enshrined within my memory
You will remain untouched by time, by life unsullied and unconquered—
And so perhaps it may be best we have no time for letters—or for meetings.

Learn to Tell Fortunes

NO STUFFY moments when the crowd drops in—if fortune-telling's in your bag of tricks!

"Let's see what your handwriting tells," you begin, passing pencils and paper around.

The small, neat letters of Jim White's signature say he's patient, persevering. Anne Hill's writing—slanting first this way, then that—hints she's moody, indecisive. But Jack Brown's large signature proclaims his generosity, frankness, self-confidence.

How letters are spaced, the way "t's" are crossed—all give fascinating personality tips and are easy to remember.

You make yourself mighty popular, too, when you know how to read thrilling fortunes according to the numbers on dominoes.

Have your fortune seeker choose three dominoes from a set you've turned face down and thoroughly shuffled. A domino with four spots on one half, two on the other, means a big date! The six-two combination promises good luck, the five-blank a proposal.

Even a friendly cup of tea offers you a chance to "do your stuff." But dress up your tea-leaf reading with a little mystery. Your "client" must turn the cup three times, clockwise, then upside down. Now you, with a wise and witch-like manner, gaze on the leaves! With a little imagination you see all sorts of shapes in them. Leaves grouped hat shape speak of a rival in love. A ship promises a voyage, an acorn at top of cup foretells wealth.

Even more exciting to tell card fortunes. What's the secret of the "Seven Gypsy Sisters?" What's the meaning of "The Mystic Nine?" Such card secrets are revealed in our 40-page booklet, "Let Me Tell Your Fortune." Gives thrilling ways to read cards, the meaning of every card in the deck. Tells how to read handwriting, tea leaves, numbers, dominoes. Tips on crystal gazing. Fortune games for parties.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Let Me Tell Your Fortune," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Early American, 18th Century Top Furniture Styles

Eighteenth Century and Early American will be the two most favored furniture styles this spring, in the opinion of furniture stylists and fashion writers who reviewed the new home furnishing styles at the New York and Chicago markets.

In all of the period styles for living room furniture a new emphasis will be placed on comfort in the over-stuffed pieces. The better lounging chairs and sofas are being built to fit the contours of the body and are filled with curled hair, a highly resilient and long-lasting stuffing material.

Swedish Modern, which has the simple lines of modern furniture combined with the livableness of traditional furniture, will have a strong following.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 21.

I often hear that these dispatches lead you to believe that we entertain nothing but glittering trivialities in gaga Gotham. Such lovely but comparatively unimportant critters as bubble dancers, radio moaners, movie goddesses. All very nice in their ways, but comparative blanks over the long pull. Of course, it isn't so. It's just a reportorial temptation. And that's why I was delighted to rush down to meet the newly arrived Eve Curie, daughter of the late co-discoverers of radium, Dr. and Mme. Marie Curie, and author of that brilliant biography of her wonderful mother.

ALICE HUGHES

Here's a woman that is a woman, taken from any angle! She's a lovely, poised girl of 34, wearing her hair upswished and a natty, form-fitting suit when she came in on the Paris the other day. "I'm strictly a feminist," she assured us. "My sister is the scientist of the family, though, of course, I shall talk about my mother's work and about radium during my lectures in this country." You bet she will; that's what we want to hear! She's happy and on tip-toe to begin her tour of the republic, which will take her as far West as the Fair at San Francisco

She's been here before, of course. At 17 she came with her revered mother when the great scientist was presented with the gram of radium—the gift of the American people. She speaks excellent English—and if she can talk as well as she can write, Aunt Alice, for one of thousands, will scramble into the hall. It was really exciting to meet this handsome and brilliant young woman, for I still remember her book with such joy, and how I choked up time and again as I read of the scientific struggles of her truly great parents. What a welcome visitor! Have a good time Mlle. Eve—you'll have a warm greeting!

Culottes for evening

The new mode "de soir" as worn by Miss Gertrude Lawrence in her forthcoming play, "Skylark."

Surely Washington is the scene for women in trousers! Smart ones have been wearing daytime slacks, and evening pajamas this season at southern resorts—now Gertrude Lawrence, world-famous for her chic, chooses to wear trousers in her new play, giving them full fashion confirmation! A variation of the popular shirtwaist-and-skirt theme, really. But the full-flowing divided evening skirt is an invitation to kick up your heels! Until you choose to draw on the attached evening hood . . . when you can't help but look quite exotic!

Our collection of evening culottes includes prints with plain, two-tone combinations, and wide belts to emphasize the small waistline. In luxuriously soft "Jerma" Rayon Crepe.

Daytime Culottes at 29.75 to 39.75

B. Pillow-padded shoulders which shrug at dull care and slenderize the figure—in rayon crepe of aqua with brown dots. Lacquer red are the belt and lining of the hood (which looks smart up or down). A lacquer red collar is formed merely by zipping the dress to the preferred neckline and turning it back. $49.75.

West Meets East as Chinese Troupe Performs to Raise Refugee Funds

Program Given Under Auspices Of Ambassador Dr. Hu Shih Before 400 Washington Residents

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

West met East across the footlights last night when a company of Chinese actors and musicians performed for an audience of around 400 Washington residents.

In this country to raise funds for war refugees, the Chinese Cultural Theater Group presented its first program here at the Wardman Park Theater under the auspices of the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih. The latter, recuperating from a serious illness, disobeyed doctor's orders to attend the performance and to be host at the buffet supper afterward. Guests at both events included hand-picked representatives of Washington's diplomatic, official and residential circles.

From the time the curtain of royal blue satin with its embroidered plum blossom motif swung back for the first number until the final scene, the gathering enjoyed its "Evening in Cathay" portrayed in song, dance and pantomime. Tunes, sometimes eerie, sometimes weird to the Western ear, and exotic interpretations of familiar themes added to the unique atmosphere of a performance that was fascinating from first to last. Richly embroidered costumes, girls as slim as willow wands and men who made every gesture contribute to the general effect kept the audience entertained for almost three hours.

The Chinese Ambassador, arriving early at the theater, found that a few guests had already gathered. He was accompanied by Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador to France, and Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Li, of New York. Mme. Koo was a striking figure in a Chinese gown of deep rose satin fashioned with a wide band of silver ribbon outlining the high neckline and ornamenting the front. On her shoulder she wore an orchid. Mrs. Li was swathed in mink over a white frock.

Mrs. Pu Hsiao, wife of the assistant military attache of the Chinese Embassy, assisted in welcoming the guests both at the theater and in the Continental Room, where the supper was served. She was gowned in pale pink brocaded satin, fashioned on Chinese lines and slit from ankle to knee. Also greeting guests and helping them to find seats was Miss Louise Wang, who was in native costume.

Mme. Wellington Koo Sits With Mrs. Reed

Just before the program began, the Chinese Ambassador welcomed guests and in a few brief words pointed out that members of the Chinese Theater group had traveled more than 20,000 miles in the hope of being of service to their country in its time of distress.

Among those in the audience were Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who sat on either side of Mme. Koo; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, who was in the same row, and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, who was also in the center front section. Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin were nearby; also Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol; Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy, the latter in pale turquoise velvet; Mr. and Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, she in red crepe with a train.

Many Notables Among Guests

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom were seen chatting with friends during the intermission. The Siamese Minister and Mme. Rajamaitri came in shortly before the curtain swirled back for the first act; as did the Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi, who were accompanied by the latter's daughter, Miss Sibella Skidelsky; the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg and the Counselor of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Feer.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert M. Danford were seen in the crowd; also, Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, the latter wearing a simple black frock very effectively; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Admiral and Mrs. George Pettingill, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Gen. Charles Burnett.

Miss Yoeh Wang Noted in Crowd

Miss Yoeh Wang, daughter of the former Chinese Ambassador, was seen in the crowd that thronged into the Continental Room for supper. Wearing a smart Chiness frock of white embroidered in gold, she was a center of much attention and held a little court of her own at one end of the room.

Others seen either in the theater or at the supper following were Senator Arthur Capper, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, who wore a stunning gown of dark red velvet; Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. James H. Hughes, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Senator David I. Walsh, Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Representative and Mrs. Robert B. Chipperfield, Mrs. Carlos Del Mar, Mrs. Fred Britten, Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, and scores of others.

"Drunken Queen" Draws Applause

One of the outstanding performers of the evening was Miss Virginia Chang, whose "drunken queen" number was something to write home about. The daughter of a former Chinese Minister to Chile, she recently was chosen by a newsreel company as representative of modern China. Ethel Chun, singer, also came in for her share of applause in her street singer number. Greeted with an ovation each time she appeared was the attractive narrator, Laura Jee, whose crimson satin frock was a dashing bit of color against the blue background of the curtain, and whose witty explanations of the forthcoming scene made up some of the most entertaining interludes in the program. "A Night in Cathay" will be given tonight at the Belasco Theater, proceeds to go to war refugees.

Society Fills Boxes to Hear Stokowski

Blisses and Peters Lead Regulars at Symphony Concert

The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra always draws society in large numbers when it plays in Washington, and when Leopold Stokowski conducts the occasion is especially gala.

If there were more empty boxes than usual last night at a Stokowski concert, it was no doubt because so many people are still South or else abed with the prevailing grip.

Among boxholders invariably present, however, were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, the latter wearing a pale green frock particularly striking with her titian hair. Next to them sat the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, who were accompanied by the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard. Mme. Peter was in a black crepe frock with silver trimming on the full sleeves and Mme. Lombard wore an ermine wrap over her gown.

Miss Boardman Entertains Guests

With Miss Mabel Boardman in her box were several friends, including Mrs. Cary Grayson, who wore a black crepe dinner dress with a square neck and short sleeves, and Victor Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy. Mrs. Mallet is in England on a visit.

Mme. Oumansky, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy, occupied a box with several members of the embassy staff. They were enthusiastic in applause of the Fifth Symphoyn of Dmitri Shostakovich, written to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the Soviet Republic and performed for the first time in Washington last evening.

Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, who attends most Capital concerts, was an early arrival. The aunt of the Duchess of Windsor wore a sky blue satin gown

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller occupied their usual box. Mrs. Miller wearing a black gown with an emerald green scarf.

Silver fox capes were everywhere last evening. Countess Roberti, wife of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, wore one over her black gown. She was accompanied by Count Roberti Others in the silver fox contingent were Mrs. John Newbold and Mrs. William D. Thomas. The former was accompanied by her husband and Mrs. Thomas was with Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark.

Lobby Thronged For Intermission

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips were glimpsed making their way through the crowded lobby at the intermission. Mrs Phillips wore a long black velvet cloak

Miss Dorothy Villard, in a Roman striped frock, was with her cousin, Harry Villard. Another striped wrap was worn by Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, who topped off her coat with a silver fox wrap.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hiss were seen chatting with Mr. and Mrs Edward Retz. Miss Stellita Stapleton, who was accompanied by Harry LaFarge, ore a purple satin frock with fuschia trimming. Others present included Spottswood White, John Stonborough, seen chatting with Miss Kitty DuBoise; Maj. David Barry, Miss Mary Wilson, Mrs. Hamilton V. Bryan, in a black velvet coat with a little hood lined with red satin, accompanied by Mrs. John Magruder, who was in deep purple crepe; Miss Nora Magee and Miss Mary Bradley.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Mr. Farley's Favorite: 'My Wild Irish Rose;' James Hamilton Beams at 'Ave Maria'

FAVORITE tunes of favorite people:

Postmaster General James A. Farley likes "My Wild Irish Rose" . . . Senator James Hamilton Lewis beams when the orchestra plays Schubert's "Ave Maria" . . . When Mrs. John Gross enters the ballroom, Sidney always swings into her favorite, "Strike Up the Band, Here Comes a Sailor" . . . Long before he started working for the President, Marvin McIntyre's best loved song was "Home on the Range." He also likes "Lindy Lou," "Way Down South" and others which he can harmonize . . . "I'll Get By" appeals to Mrs. Wallach Merriam, while Senator Henry Cabot Lodge says that his current favorite is "Thanks for Everything" . . . Representative Edith Nourse Rogers thinks "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" is an amusing song.

His secretary says the Vice President has no favorite song, and that he has never been heard to sing or whistle.

THE NURSERY on the third floor of the White House is currently occupied, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., left their little baby, Franklin D. Roosevelt 3d, there, while they were visiting her parents in Palm Beach. The baby, who is called "Jo" for short, entertains the President when the latter breakfasts each morning at 9.

THE Attorney General, Frank Murphy, has had to postpone his trip to Palm Beach, where Democrats seem to be very popular this year. He might go to the West Coast instead. He was to have been the guest of James Cromwell, but the later decided to come to Washington for a visit before joining his mother, Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, for Easter in Palm Beach . . . There's more than a chance that Mlle. Eve Curie, now in California, will visit Washington before returning to Paris. Chic, attractive, a talented violinist, she is mostly famous for the biography of her mother. Mlle. Curie, then a young girl, accompanied the distinguished scientist when she visited Washington during the Harding Administration to receive a gift of radium from Americans.

A DEBUTANTE of the season was describing a current party to her father, a Virginian. "I met so-and-so," she said, "and asked him whether he was from Maryland or Virginia." "Don't ever do such a thing again," said her father, horrified. "If a person is from Virginia, he'll tell you within the first five minutes, and if not, you don't want to embarrass him."

FIVE TO SEVEN yesterday at Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Hartley's:

Mr. Hartley has just published a book on foreign policy, "Our Maginot Line." Consequently he has just begun to emerge into the party world again.

Among the guests: Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, in a beige suit trimmed with fox, chatting with Mme. Eward Feer, wife of the Counselor of the Swiss Legation . . . Mrs. Leis Clark, accompanied by Mr. Clark . . . Mrs. Drew Pearson, who had been modeling all day in Mrs. Eldridge Jordan's fashion show, and who looked like a fashion plate in a beige wool dress with a matching hat held on with a narrow black ribbon . . . Elsie Ekengren, hatless and with a Sun Valley sunburn.

Mrs. William T. Mann, who says she will give up her job in a local dress shop the first of next month . . . Sisters Barbara and Rosalind Wright chatting with Anthony de Balasy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation. Mr. Balasy had been ordered back home for duty effective May 1 but now expects to be here several months longer.

Mr. and Mrs. Haetley have one of the most attractive houses in Georgetown. Built over a hundred years ago, it has a long living room, with the walls painted a pale green. The curtains are a soft yellow. Yesterday the room was filled with vases of crimson gladioli, sweet peas and other flowers, a reminder that it was the first day of spring.

Dorsey Fisher, Mme. Lombard, Laura Tuckerman, in a becoming new spring bonnet, and Daniel Moore, of Columbus, brother of Mrs. Pearson, were others present.

Senators' Wives Plan 'At Home'

When Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of Senator Clark, of Idaho, and Mrs. Scott W. Lucas, wife of Senator Lucas, of Illinois, entertain tomorrow at a joint "at home" at 2501 Massachusetts avenue, the event will mark the first party of this kind they have given since their husbands, once members of the House of Representatives, were elected to the Senate. The affair, for which no invitations have been issued, will take place from 3 to 6.

Those who will pour during the afternoon include Mrs. Edward R. Burke, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. John H. Hughes, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. Gillingham Morrill, Mrs. Robert C. Horner, Mrs. William Arnold, Mrs. Clarence Goodwin, Mrs. Addison T. Smith, Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Mrs. Basil Manly.

Generally assisting will be Mrs. Eugene Cox, Mrs. Lawrence Arnold, Mrs. Ralph E. Church, Mrs. H. B. Arledge, Mrs. Harry B. Coffee, Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mrs. Phil Ferguson, Mrs. Charles Halleck and Mrs. Walter Wyatt.

Decorations will be spring flowers, with calla lilies and tulips predominating.

Denmark's Crown Prince, Princess To Visit Capital

With the coming of royalty, long names will be in style in Capital society, so prepare to pronounce them now. Due in Washington about noon on Saturday, May 6, are the Crown Prince of Denmark, Christian Frederik Franz Michael Carl Valdemar Georg, and the Crown Princess Ingrid Victoria Sofia Louise Margareta. They will occupy a suite at the Shoreham Hotel.

Before spending three days in the Capital, they will be guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park.

In their entourage will be Countess Sipuille Reventlow, daughter of Denmark's Minister to London, and Karl Eskelund, chief of the press division of the Danish foreign office. Countess Reventlow is lady in waiting to the princess.

Mr., Mrs. Barrett Entertain at Dinner Party

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Barrett, who spent the past few winters in Washington, are now in Denver, Colo., where they have taken a house for a few months. They expect to return to Washington later.

"Flight From Youth," Mr. Barrett's most recent novel, is running serially in a nationally known magazine. Mr. Barrett's first book, "Woman on Horseback," which was published in this country last year, has just been brought out in Germany and is having a wide sale through Central Europe.

One of the most favorable of its recent reviews was written by Baron von Prittwiz, former German Ambassador to the United States.

Youth vs. Age Argued By Democratic Women

Sen. Caraway Expresses Concern Over Bars to Employment of Persons of 40 or More; Rep. O'Day Says Young People Need Most Aid

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Youth versus age was argued yesterday at the luncheon which marked the first get-together of delegates to the fourth biennial conference of the organizations affiliated with the Woman's National Democratic Club. Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, championed the cause of those over 40 and hard put to find jobs, and Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, that of young people. The luncheon at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, preceded the opening session of the conference in the afternoon.

Senator Caraway said she was concerned by the rapidly appearing bars to employment of those who have reached the age of 40 and more. She declared she favored the cause of youth, but "there is a dark picture in the economic field confronting those who have arrived at the age of 40. I think the Federal Government should be a leader in attacking the problem of unemployment for older workers by increasing or abolishing the age limits for entrance into Government work, except position requiring physical strength."

Says More Young People Need Jobe

Representative O'Day, taking issue with her on the subject of legislation for older persons, said: "Young people are coming to me for jobs and there are so many more of them in proportion to the older people. We must do more for the children. The proportion of old to young is out of balance. Children are dying because we are not taking better care of them.

"In 1920, for every 100 persons between the ages of 20 and 60, there were 90 under 20 years of age and only 13 over 60. In 1925 there were only 69 young people for every 100 and 17 past 60. By 1975 the number of young persons will have dropped to 48 and those past 60 will have risen to 40. The proportion of falling off in youth is half again as large as the increase in old age."

Representative Mary T. Norton discussed organization work.

"I cannot stress sufficiently the importance of organization functions now and between 1940," she said. "This in-between time is so important."

Women's Aid Needed Between Elections

"The feeling in this country is that men do not want women in politics. Women are grand around election time, ringing doorbells and doing the odd jobs, but between times men don't see them in the picture. We are important—we are important 365 days in the year. If we can get our heads together, we will make them see the point. We must put personal likes and dislikes in the closet and study working conditions and local problems in order to have the fundamentals necessary for candidacy. Then we must stick together, leave out personalities and work for what the candidate represents."

Last night majority leaders of the Senate and House, Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, and Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, with Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, were speakers at the dinner for delegates, also given at the clubhouse. All three expressed confidence in a Democratic victory in 1940 and gratification that the Democratic party had a leader like President Roosevelt.

Representative Rayburn scored the Democrats in Washington who were pessimistic and declared they were the ones who wanted the nomination and couldn't get it. He said the Republicans after accusing the Democrats of being "rubber stamps" were themselves examples of it. "All they have to do is vote against everything we want to do."

Senator Pepper mentioned no names, but criticized the stand of "a Republican much talked-of for a Presidential candidate" who is a member of the education and labor committee of the Senate of which he is chairman. This member, he said, "made a tirade against public education and said we were already spending too much money."

The Democrats reported two bills out of the committee, one for Federal aid to education, and the other to aid crippled children in securing education, he told the women.

Mrs. Pepper, in introducing her husband, said she considered him the salt of the earth. Senator Barkley, who was the next speaker, addressed her as Mrs. Pepper, and the Senator as "Mr. Salt."

Nearly 200 attended the luncheon and dinner. Mrs. Samuel Herrick, chairman of the conference, presented some of the guests. Democratis women are here from 26 States. Tonight there will be a mass meeting at the Shoreham Hotel, open to the public, with Francis Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, as the main speaker.

Dorothy Sands Tea Guest of Radcliffe Club

Dorothy Sands, who plays Prossy with Cornelia Otis Skinner in "Candida," was guest of honor at a tea given yesterday by the Radcliffe Club at the Parrot Tea Room.

Miss Sands, like Miss Skinner, noted for her solo programs, as well as for her roles in the theater, gives credit to Prof. George Baker's "47 Workshop" for her training. He produced plays not yet ready for professional performance, for an invited audience of 400, all members of which wrote out their criticisms. On the basis of these, the playwright revised his play.

Miss Sands was in Tom Wolfe's first play "Welcome to Our City," which he later rewrote as his book, "Look Homeward Angel." John Lodge, just back from England and visiting his brother, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., played opposite her. She also was in Philip Barry's first play there, "A Punch for Judy."

Among members of the Radcliffe Club who were Miss Sands' contemporaries in college are: Mrs. James S. Armstrong, the president; Miss Amy Holland who, with Mrs. Homer Rainey, presided at the tea table yesterday; Mrs. Louis Hunter, Mrs. Frances Selsbee, Miss Helen Hastings, dean of Mount Vernon Seminary; Mrs. Mary Foster and Mrs. Anna Page.

Among others present were: John Kerr Rose, Miss Louise Caton, Miss Rozella Bosthwick, Miss Mabel Colcord, Mrs. Louise D. Meigs, Mrs. Gregory Rankin, Miss Helen Lingenfelter, Miss Dorothy Paetow, Mrs. Nellie L. Rogge, Miss Margaret Gilman, daughter of the late Arthur Gilman, who conceived the idea of establishing Radcliffe College; Mrs. William C. VanVleck, Miss Clara Driscoll, Mrs. Harold Morrison, Miss Anne Geddes, Mrs. Amelia H. Hood, Miss Eleanor Poland, Miss Charlotte White, Miss Edith Brooks, Miss Jeanne Simmons and Mrs. Julian Marshall, of Baltimore.

D. C. Congress Lauds Ballou

The board of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, at its meeting yesterday, passed a resolution commending Dr. Frank Ballor his action in the recent controversy over the use of Central High School auditorium "for a profit-making venture, not connected with the public schools."

Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the congress, and 16 other delegates were elected to represent the District at the convention of the national congress, to be held in Cincinnati May 1, 2, 3, and 4. The local organization will send a full quota of delegates as one of the matters expected to come up is the question of the removal of the national officers from their present location in the National Education Association building here to Chicago. The move was contemplated before the date of the national convention but, due to pressure brought on the basis it could not be legally done until authorized by action of the convention, an executive meeting was called and the move postponed pending the session.

A meeting of the summer round-up advisory committee will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in the N. E. A. board room preliminary to the meeting of local summer round-up chairmen Friday morning. Mrs. Alma Hudson, chairman of the committee, announced she expected to have more than 50 schools participating.

The board adopted a resolution asking that the original health appropriation be restored to the District budget, and commending Dr. George Ruhland on his conduct of the health department.

Election on Friday

The Woman's Alliance of All Souls Unitarian Church will have its annual election at the church on Friday.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN, here from all parts of the country for the conference at the Woman's National Democratic Club, are resourceful in addition to being an attractive and enthusiastic group.

They are going for a sight-seeing drive today and needed stickers to identify their cars. Having no official ones, they set to work to make them. They cut out pictures of the President, about 10 inches high, and will paste them on their windshields, for identification — following their leader through the Capital.

UNLIKE many conventions, this has brought more young women than older ones to town. They are here from all sections. Mrs. Mary Halloran Soules, of Salt Lake City, Utah, drove through alone. Mrs. Mignon Patterson, national committee woman from Oklahoma, who doesn't look over 20, says she has been waiting for just such a trip for 30 years. She is a member of the Ruth Bryan Owen Club of Oklahoma and has been active in party politics for a long time.

From Houston, Tex., there is another young and attractive delegate, Mrs. Eula Carroll, who is on the staff of the Houston Post.

Rep. Brewster On Temperance

Banquet Part of Year's Observance of Founder's Birthday

The growth of intelligent, voluntary temperance, particularly among youth, is one of the most encouraging signs of the times, Representative Ralph O. Brewster told members of the District W. C. T. U., addressing them at a banquet held last night at the Roosevelt Hotel. The affair was part of their year's observance of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Frances Willard, founder of the organization.

Temperance in thought and utterance as well as increasing abstinence from intoxicating drink is essential to the salvation of America in these troublous times, said Representative Brewster.

"On every hand, there are those who seek to inflame America to their own ends. America needs as much today as in the days of Washington to be ever on guard.

"Let America demonstrate the capacity of a self-governing democracy, to put 10,000,000 Americans back to work. We shall not then need to worry about tyranny anywhere in the world. All mankind will want to follow our example."

Mrs. William H. Ramsey, president of the District organization, presided, and greetings were brought by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, of the Metropolitan Police. Dr. Harry D. Burgan offered the invocation and the Rev. Walter Franklin Atkinson pronounced the benediction. Miss Mary Hooper played accordion solos and Mrs. Pierce Miller sang, accompanied by Mrs. Atkinson.

The tribute to Frances Willard was paid by Mrs. Marie N. Brinley, who pointed out the temperance leader's interest not only in that reform but in all social welfare to benefit mankind.

Irish Envoy Addresses Club

Maintaining the reputation of the Irish for storytelling, Robert Brennan, Minister of Eire, entertained the luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club yesterday with jokes as well as comments on his country and countrymen.

At the suggestion of Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller, the club president, he also made reference to the approaching visit of Eamon De Valera, American-born prime minister, and the flood of invitations which have come to him from all parts of the country. His visit has been extended from the ten days originally planned, to six weeks.

Despite the reputation of the Irish for loving a fight, the minister declared Eire was "not concerned with all these wars. If possible at all, we'll keep out of them. But it may not be possible."

He closed his talk by reading the preamble of the Irish constitution, "whose principles of social justice cannot be improved on."

Civic Groups Appear Today On Budget

Dropping of Welfare Reorganization Is Indicated by Collins

Civic organizations will be heard this afternoon on the District budgetary estimates, Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, stated last night after questioning Health Department officials and Gallinger physicians in executive session.

Collins indicated that the elaborate reorganization plan for the welfare department will not be adopted by the sub-committee, in announcing that the relief problem will be taken up the latter part of this week and that hearings will be concluded by Saturday.

Armory Considered

He also intimated that the sub-committee would not be inclined to increase the local relief appropriation in view of the better outlook for private employment.

The sub-committee is considering recommending an appropriation to purchase a site and possibly start construction of a National Guard armory, it was learned, although no supplemental estimate has been prepared by the commissioners or submitted by the budget bureau.

Silent on Gallinger

Collins declined to say what the sub-committee may do about the Gallinger appropriations this year although he indicated that health department officials are satisfied with budget estimates.

The House District Committee has urged the sub-committee to increase the Gallinger estimate $200,000 above the Budget Bureau figure to provide for additional personnel.

Among Health Department officials heard by the Collins sub-committee were Health Officer George C. Ruhland, Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, and the five resident physicians at the hospital.

Northeast Citizens Unite to Protest Vandalism in Schools

Post Staff Photos.

Protesting against $14,000 damage done to school buildings last year, civic leaders in the Northeast section met yesterday in the Stuart Junior High School. R. W. Strawbridge, principal of Stuart, listens to discussions while Mrs. Ann Utz, clerk, takes notes. Capt. Richard Mansfield, of Ninth Precinct (left inset), urged that playgrounds be kept open after school hours. The Rev. C. S. Abbott, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd (right inset) blamed the damage on lack of adequate playground space, and urged co-operation between school and church in teaching children their civic duty

Leaders in schools, churches and civic organizations of the Northeast area yesterday blamed the $14,000 damage to school windows last year partly on the lack of adequate playgrounds for school children and and partly on the attitude of parents who "don't seem to care" about their children.

A mass meeting of Northeast residents, May 8, in the Stuart Junior High School auditorium, was arranged by the 50 delegates at yesterday's meeting, caled by R. W. Strawbridge, Stuart principal, and Miss F. C. Mortinmer, Wheatley School principal.

The need for more playground space and for keeping playgrounds open after school hours was discussed by the Rev. C. S. Abbott, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd, and Capt. Richard Mansfield, of the Ninth Precinct.

Recognizing that schools cannot afford to pay "the proper type of men" to supervise playgrounds kept open after school hours, Capt. Mansfield suggested that even a janitor to open and close gates was enough, as "any place is better than the streets." He ridiculed the proposal to establish "play streets" here as in New York.

Protecting school windows by wire screens was urged by other speakers, pointing out that many school playgrounds are so small it is impossible to play ball in them without breaking windows. It was generally agreed that while most of the damage is accidental, many children are not taught respect for other people's property.

Plans to teach parent sto amuse their children at home also were proposed. The following committee will report the views of the meeting at the mass meeting on May 8: R. W. Strawbridge, T. F. Ferry, also of the Stuart Junior High School; Mrs. R. B. Butcher, principal of Lovejoy School; Mrs. J. C. Frampton, Wheatley School Parent-Teacher Association, and Dr. J. Harold Mumper, pastor of the Keller Memorial Church.

Police Boys Club Workers Renew Efforts for Quota

Volunteers workers in the $75,000 campaign drive of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club vowed yesterday to continue their efforts in the officially closed drive until the $21,000 deficit was attained. The drive has realized a total of $54,000.

At their weekly luncheon at the Cosmos Club, solicitors told Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, that they were determined to reach the goal. Gen. Cox thanked them heartily.

Last year a similar campaign ended as did the present but through extended efforts $72,000 was finally realized.

The campaign headquarters, 1422 H. street northwest will remain open temporarily according to L. Gordon Leech, campaign director.

Congress Gets Pan-American Annex. Tangle

Interior Department Protests Planned Site Of $650,000 Building

The 5-year-old question of where the Pan-American Union is to build a $650,000 annex to house its rapidly expanding activities went back to Congress yesterday in a bill prepared by the Interior Department, which asks legislation to prohibit construction on the Constitution avenue triangle south of the Interior Building.

Congress at one time authorized erection of the annex on that site, and the Pan-American Union built a $50,000 tunnel in that direction to provide underground passage between the two buildings and for a central heat and water system. Secretary Ickes succeeded in holding up the construction on grounds it would cut off the view from his new office structure.

President Roosevelt intervened with a request that the triangle be developed as a park, which was done—leaving the union with a tunnel and a Carnegie building gift of $650,000. The Fine Arts Commission, which had formerly approved the triangle site, then suggested that the annex be put on the present Pan-American site, occupying grounds now taken up by landscaping and a lily pond.

The bill was referred to the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

Women Back Sales Tax For District

Federation of Clubs Tells House That Tourists Would Share Levy Burden

By James D. Secrest.

The Federation of Citizens Associations yesterday suggested a simple plan for balancing the 1940 District budget without resorting to either the income or the sales tax, but District officials immediately raised objections and the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs appeared only mildly interested.

The plan, as explained by L. A. Carruthers, president, and A. M. Edwards, chairman, of the fiscal relations committee, proposed retention of the $1.75 realty tax, an increase in utility taxes, abandonment of the business privilege levy, and maintenance of the intangible personal property tax with more teeth in it.

Offered as Alternate

The realty tax actually was offered only as an alternate to an increase in the Federal payment to the $8,100,000 figure which the Overton formula would authorize. Chairman Nichols, of the House sub-committee, quickly discarded that idea, however, and brought out the fact that a $1.75 realty tax would raise $3,300,000, or more than the difference between the present $5,000,000 lump sum and the amount which the Overton plan would produce.

Expressing keen interest in the idea that the tax problem might be solved so simply, Nichols asked for more data, however, to explain an estimate of $32,500,000 expected from present taxes with a $1.50 realty rate.

Called a Stop-Gap

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, while admitting that the 1940 budget might be balanced by the federation's plan, protested it would constitute only another stop-gap revenue measure.

"We would have to come right back up here again next year for more tax legislation," he said.

"What we want is permanent legislation that will give us not only a well-balanced and modern tax system but will take care of the District needs for some years to come."

The only new taxes proposed by the federation were on the four major public utilities. The citizens group recommended a 5 per cent gross receipts tax on all of the utilities except the Capital Transit Co., which would be required to pay 4 per cent on gross receipts. These taxes, it was estimated, would raise $400,000 more than present utility levies.

The tax program prepared by Dr. Chester Pond and indorsed by the Citizens Advisory Committee proposed 4 per cent on the three utilities and 3 per cent on the transit company.

Both the income tax and the sales tax were condemned by the federation.

Sales Tax Denounced

Paul Sharrenberg, national legislative representative of the American Federation of Labor, denounced the proposed sales tax and recalled that the Democratic Party in 1924 had opposed it in its platform. Nichols pointed out that the platform referred to a national rather than a local sales tax. Sharrenberg particularly protested that a sales tax would ruin local printing industries by driving business to other cities.

Mrs. Ernest Howard, legislative chairman of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, stated that the 6,100 women she represented favor the sales tax. She pointed out that it would be easy to collect, would tap the 3,000,000 tourists who visit the Capital annually, and that it wouldn't hamper local industries.

Speaking as a private citizen, David Whatley proposed a Federal income tax on all Federal employes, regardless of their residence, to even up any State income taxes that may be imposed under legislation now before Congress.

Ernest F. Henry, of the Petworth Citizens Association, approved the Pond tax report and stated that his association had indorsed the sales tax in a poll in which 300 of the 1,300 members voted.

Girl Student, 16, Whipped; Board Orders Inquiry

An investigation into the whipping of a "disobedient" 16-year-old girl student March 14 at Francis Junior High School was launched yesterday by school officials.

Assistant Schools Superintendent G. C. Wilkinson said the investigation was started after he had definitely established the fact that the girl had been beaten. Corporal punishment is prohibited by school regulations, he said.

Monday night the Lincoln Civic Association defended the disciplinary action of Mrs. Mayme Plummer, Francis Junior High School principal, and put itself on record as in favor of more corporal punishment in local public schools.

Funds Offered To Maintain Czech Legation

Hundreds of telegrams and letters, pledging moral and financial support, have poured in at the Czecho-Slovak Legation here, it was learned yesterday.

Col. Vladimir Hurban, who still regards himself as the Czecho-Slovak Minister and who has refused to turn over the legation to Nazi diplomats, has not yet decided about accepting financial offers to maintain the $115,000 mansion on "embassy row."

The German Embassy has made no further move since Col. Hurban refused to surrender the legation.

Life Begins at 70

Laughter Has Kept Him Young, Dr. Hazen Is Still Hearty at 86

DR. W. P. C. HAZEN

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross,

"To know how to grow old," said an eighteenth century sage, "is the master work of wisdom and one of the most difficult chapters in the great art of living."

Dr. W. P. C. Hazen qualifies for a passing grade with plenty to spare. To the thousands of Washingtonians who know this 85-year-old physician he needs no introduction. To the others, he is hereby presented as one of the grand old men of medicine in the District of Columbia, a kindly practitioner of the old school who followed his profession more than a half century before retiring about five years ago.

Still Hearty at 85

Still hearty and on his toes, with an engaging smile for all who come to his home at 511 East Capitol street, Dr. Hazen has not allowed himself to be counted out just because he yielded to advancing years to the extent of withdrawing from active medical work. He remains the busy vice president of the National Capital Bank, the insatiable reader of books, the lively participant in affairs of the Board of Trade, Shrine and other organizations of which he has been a member for years.

If any one factor must be singled out in explanation of his enviable success at what, for want of a better term, is called "old age," it has to be his sense of humor. Laughter has kept him young. He loves to tell a story and he loves to hear one. At the same time he is a model of unstudied dignity.

"You're looking at a man," he says with a chuckle, "who's been a Republican all his life, but never voted. That was because I came to Washington when I was 20, just missing a chance to cast my first ballot in the State which previously had been my home—Pennsylvania."

William Patterson Clark Hazen, to identify him in full, obtained his first view of the Nation's Capital from the seat of a buggy in which he drove from Northampton County, Pennsylvania. One of eight children, of whom he is the lone survivor, he had left the farm for Washington to take a position as apothecary in the United States Naval Hospital.

Two in Class of '77

An elder brother, David, was a physician here and the Hippocratic bug soon bit young William. He entered Georgetown Medical College and was graduated in 1877. In fact, he was 50 per cent of the entire graduating class that year. On his office wall hangs a group picture of the class of '77, which consists of a likeness of Dr. Hazen and one other young man now dead.

He was a resident physician at Washington Asylum Hospital, predecessor of Gallinger Municipal Hospital, when Guiteau was hanged for the assassination of President Garfield. It was Dr. Hazen who pronounced the assassin dead.

In those early days as a practicing doctor he had plans to become a surgeon, but along came an epidemic of grippe to bring into sharp focus the importance of general medicine. When the emergency was over, he was definitely embarked upon the career of a general practitioner, not a specialist.

Dr. Hazen eats only one meal a day, a substantial breakfast. He shuns meat, drinks much milk. He will be 86 on April 27.

"Yes, indeed, Ulysses S. Grant, another good Republican, and I share the same birthday," he laughs.

Petworth Citizens Request No-Liquor Zones in District

Establishment of dry zones in the District, as provided in Section 7 of the liquor law in force, was asked last night by the Petworth Citizens Association.

According to the association, the Commissioners have the power to set up areas in which no liquor shall be sold. Machinery to record the sentiment of various sections on the question also was requested.

Need for a crosstown bus line in Northern Washington to run from Westmoreland Circle via Nineteenth street loop to Bladensburg was discussed last night by the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights. The public utilities committee was directed to write to all the citizens associations in the area asking support in urging the Capital Transit Co. to provide the line.

Proposals for a graduated income tax instead of a sales tax for the District were explained to the association by Arthur Bernstein.

National Democratic League Honors Randolph

Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman o fthe House District Committee, was honored at a dinner last night in the Hamilton Hotel, sponsored by the National Democratic League of the District, for his work in the drive for self-government and national representation for the District. Randolph Praised for Aid to D. C.

W. Va. Representative Called Presidential Timber at Dinner In His Honor

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, was described last night as a statesman of Presdiential timber before 250 guests at a testimonial dinner to the chairman of the House District Committee, sponsored by the National Democratic League of Washington at the Hamilton Hotel.

The 36-year-old legislator heard Virginia E. Jenckes, former Representative from Indiana, suggest his availability for the Presidency after two previous speakers had informally nominated him as Senator from West Virginia.

Asks Vote for D. C.

Randolph, in turn, said he "would make no bones" about his support of Representative Andrew Edmiston, seated at his right, as a candidate for governor of West Virginia.

Responding to tributes from a score of Congressmen and civic leaders, Randolph reaffirmed his conviction that citizens of the Capital must be enfranchised.

"There was never an hour," he said, "when there has been more urgent need of a reconsecration of this country to the principles of democracy. No more effective announcement of our faith could be made than an extension of full rights of citizenship to the residents of Washington."

Capper Joins in Praise

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, joined prominent Democrats in praising Randolph's tireless service to the District, stressing the West Virginian's part in the campaign for voting privileges here. "I think it's an outrage," Capper said, "that 600,000 people here at the fountainhead of our democracy don't enjoy the most elementary right of citizenship."

Others who lauded Randolph's devotion to District interests were Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce; Representatives Henry B. Steagall, Frank W. Boykin, Luther Patrick and Harry Sheppard; Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard; Malcolm S. McConihe, Democratic National Committeeman for the District; John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, and Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association.

J. F. T. O'Connor, former Comptroller of the Currency, served as toastmaster.

Grandson Lauds Memory of Crosby Noyes

It was the free air of America that enabled Crosby Stuart Noyes, for 40 years editor of the Evening Star, to develop his exceptional talent for journalism, Newbold Noyes, associate editor of the Star, and grandson of the paper's late editor, told the Columbia Historical Society last night. Under a tyranny, the speaker said, this talent could not have flowered.

The occasion at the Mayflower was in commemoration of Crosby Stuart Noyes.

Noyes was born in 1825 in Maine; he came to Washington in 1847 and almost immediately became engaged as Washington correspondent for various Northern papers. He first went to work for the newly organized Evening Star in 1855 and in partnership with two friends bought the paper in 1867. From then until his death in 1908, he was editor of the paper and an arch foe to "yellow journalism," his grandson related.

Friend to Lincoln and his War Secretary Stanton, Mr. Noyes covered some famous stories as a reporter, among them being the trial of John Brown, Abolitionist; impeachment trial of President Andrew Johnson and the preliminaries to the Hawaiian annexation.

The meeting was presided over by Allen C. Clark, president of the society. A program of music was furnished by Mr. Frank K. Sanderson, singing, accompanied by Mrs. Sanderson at the piano.

Bishop Freeman Calls on Christian Churches To Unite to Be Heard at Federation Dinner

Justice Laws Given Plaque for Service To Community

Not until the Christian churches unite will its voice be heard effectively in the world, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, last night told an audience of 300 at the annual dinner meeting of the Washington Federation of Churches.

DR. PRUDEN

Presentation of the federation silver plaque to Justice Bolitha J. Laws for "outstanding service as a Christian layman to the uplift of the community in 1938;" election of Dr. Edward H. Pruden as president, and a review of the past year's accomplishments were other highspots of the affair, held at Calvary Baptist Church.

In presenting the award to Justice Laws, who will retain it for one year and whose name will be inscribed upon it, Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen explained that it was being given on the basis of the justice's work in the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, his services to the federation, his strengthening of the confidence of local people in the courts, and his "witnessing for Christ" in his daily life.

Dr. Rasmussen was chairman of the committee which made the selection. He is a past president of the federation.

Responding, Justice Laws said he hoped that he would "continue to merit the esteem." "This occasion brings a happy song that will never be silenced . . . a gracious honor," he added. He is teacher of the A. B. Pugh Bible class.

In his early thirties, Dr. Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, is the youngest man ever to hold the federation position.

Also named to the board of directors were Page McK. Etchison, religious work director of the Y. M. C. A. and president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, and Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, vice presidents; the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, recording secretary; Norton M. Little, treasurer, and George C. Clarke, assistant treasurer.

Messages were brought by Dr. Horace E. Cromer, retiring president; Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary; Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Woman's Council, and others.

"Unity is the 'burning issue' of the day," Bishop Freeman asserted, adding that "we have reached the conclusion that segregation today is a very dangerous business."

"I am interested in the federation because it looks in the direction of the thing I'm talking about," he said.

At the opening of the meeting, Dr. Darby paid a tribute to volunteer workers in the churches, and to his staff.

Among these were Dr. John L. Mixon, director of Social Welfare Department; Mrs. Etta Russel, Juvenile Court worker; Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, hospital worker; Miss Elizabeth Feindt, and Mrs. Ruth Karle, office workers; Mrs. R. Drexilius, house manager, and Mrs. Frank A. Linzel.

Dr. Cromer, presiding, told his hearers that "such organizations as the federation opened the door to an effective and united expression of the message of Jesus Christ in the world today."

Capital News In Brief . . .

Maryland History Reviewed

Maryland's leading statesmen of Colonial days passed up the Continental Congress for "the most autocratic republican government of modern history"—the Free State's own Legislature—Dr. St. George Sioussat, Congressional Library historian, told the Society of Colonial Wars at the Metropolitan Club last night.

More interested in State affairs than those of the confederation, the most prominent Marylanders stayed home in droves when taxes sufficient to pay even their expenses to and from the Congress failed to materialize, Sioussat said.

Alumni Plans Dinner

Plans for a dinner of the national alumni of the Catholic University of America in November, at the conclusion of the university's golden jubilee year, were discussed by the Washington Branch at a meeting in the Music Building of Catholic University last night.

Arrangements were made for an athletic dinner May 1, when letters will be awarded by the alumni to members of the university teams. Members of the chapter arranged to attend requiem mass for Edward Cammack in Gibbons Hall on Saturday.

Back Overton Plan

The executive committee of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association yesterday approved the Overton plan, fixing the annual appropriations by the Federal Government to the District in proportion to its land holdings.

"The association feels that such an appropriation would be more equitable than the present lump-sum plan," Ford E. Young, president, said. The association also went on record in favor of the location of the proposed auditorium at Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

12 Corsets Stolen

Twelve corsets in a brown leather briefcase were stolen last night from the car of Tressa B. McBabe, of Wilmington, Del., as it was parked in the 1700 block of H street northwest. Also stolen were a tape measure and several order blanks.

Police Guard Birds, Windows At Curator Bartsch's Home

Feathered Guests at Scientist's 'Cafeteria' Too Great a Temptation For Boys With Air Rifles

A police scout car was detailed last night to "pay special attention" to the home of Dr. Paul Bartsch, curator of mollusks of the Smithsonian Institution.

BARTSCH

The request for police aid was made by the internationally known scientist for the safety of the dozen species of birds that feed daily at his "bird cafeteria" and for the protection of his home at 1456 Belmont street northwest.

Both are suffering, Dr. Bartsch complained, because neighborhood boys with air rifles are unable to resist the temptation of so many feeding birds and have been making his premises a hunting preserve. In the last two days, he said, the hunters have punctured five windows, shattered two and killed a mocking bird.

Last year, Dr. Bartsch recalled, the police rounded up seven boys and confiscated as many air rifles. There were no prosecutions then, but this year it will be different, Dr. Bartsch declared:

"I went out in my yard and found the mocking bird had been killed. That, with the breaking of my windows, is too much. I'm afraid we'll have to make an example."

Dr. Bartsch who specializes in marine animals but who is "interested in all outdoor life," maintains his "bird cafeteria" the year around. The "cafeteria" is a galvanized iron tray extending 15 inches beyond his dining room window. In one side is a pocket for sunflower seeds, in another a compartment for peanut hearts. Suet and water are also placed on the tray. A maid in the Bartsch home sees that the food is available at all times.

Dr. Bartsch said his cafeteria feeds 26 birds daily—two pairs of cardinals and a pair each of song sparrows, bluejays, starlings, snowbirds, mourning doves, English sparrow, chickadees, nuthatchers, downey woodpeckers, robins and—until last night—mocking birds.

For het mocking birds and robins he keeps a special delicacy—raisins—because "they like them so much and I like to give them what they like."

In a year, Dr. Bartsch said, his cafeteria bill includes payment for about 300 pounds of sunflower seed, 350 pounds of peanut hearts, and 50 pounds of raisins. He's been running the bird restaurant since 1911.

Warring Aide Is Convicted of Numbers Charge

Paul Kyle, 32, who was named in the Warring conspiracy trial as a salaried henchman of the numbers racket, was convicted on numbers charges before Justice Proctor yesterday.

Kyle did not testify in his own behalf.

Convicted also was Fred T. Lewis, 37, colored, who was arrested with Kyle in a vice squad raid on a grocery store in the 2300 block L street northwest. Capt. George M. Little, head of the squad, linked both men to the Warrings who announced some weeks ago when Emmitt Warring, the gang boss, was jailed, that they were out of business.

Postoffice Clerk Shot in Temple

S. Edward Bowman, employe of the Post Office Department, was found critically wounded by a shot in the temple last night at his home, 810 Tuckerman street northwest.

Failure to Get Hearing Irks Taxi Drivers

Session in Uproar As Recess Presents Testimony Against Cab Limit Bill

A roomful of cab drivers who wished to be heard against a bill designed to limit the number of taxis in the District raised a loud protest yesterday when a House sub-committee adjourned a hearing before reaching them.

"Hear us now," they yelled, as some advocates of the measure joined them with: "Yes, hear them and let's get this law. There'll be 100 more cabs on the street by next Tuesday."

Chairman McArdle (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said: "We have work to do in Congress. We were sent here to represent the interests of persons in our District."

Uproar Continues

As the uproar continued, Representative Schwert (Democrat), of New York, warned: "That's one of the ways not to get what you want."

Six witnesses, led by Richmond B. Keech vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, appeared in behalf of the limit proposal. They included: Harry Wender, representing the Federation of Citizens Associations; William A. Roberts, representing operators of 400 Arrow cabs; Harry C. Davis, president of the Independent Taxicab Owners Association; Bernard L. Henning and E. K. McDaniel, drivers.

Keech declared the aim of the bill is to reduce the present number of 4,000 cabs to 2,500 and said the R. U. C. had recommended such a reduction in its annual report.

Would Bar Part-Timers

The federated citizens, Wender said, are in favor of reducing the number of cabs—but also would limit the number of operators, bar from driving persons otherwise gainfully employed, insist that licenses be granted to operators and not held by finance compaines, and ask that the law go into effect immediately, rather than at the end of 30 days as specified in the bill.

Because of a ruling which makes it possible for finance companies to keep possession of licenses until cars are paid for and transfer them from one person to another, Wender charged these companies and the insurance companies have "developed a taxicab racket in the District."

Ringgold Hart, appearing for independent operators, declared the P. U. C. had arbitrarily reduced the number of Diamond cabs by 150, but had not made similar reductions elsewhere.

"The present flexibility in cab numbers means great uncertainty to all concerned," Roberts said.

The Rumble of the Rails Inspires Miss Skinner

Star of 'Candida' Likes to Write on Trains; Seeks a New Play for Next Season; About Mr. Cromwell and Miss Temple

MISS CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER is enjoying a "sabbatical year" that differs slightly from the one recently indulged in by Katharine Cornell. Instead of taking a complete vacation from the theater, Miss Skinner is merely taking a leave of absence from the exacting demands of her original and distinctive una-dramas and playing a single role in a comedy peopled by other players. That is a rare experience for her. Instead of being the "whole show," on this visit to Washington she is merely appearing in the title role of Shaw's venerable comedy of "Candida."

BELL

"It is an unusual adventure in the theater," she said yesterday afternoon in her hotel suite, "to hear other voices in the dressing-rooms and know that the entire responsibility for a complete performance of a definite plot does not entirely devolve upon me."

In "Candida," currently at the National, Miss Skinner feels, or so one suspects, more or less like the youngster who has just been dismissed from school for the summer holiday. The novelty of it appeals to her. That is why she is on the alert for another good play that will serve her stellar purposes next year. She would rather do a play than revert to her repertory of una-dramas, but better than either, she would be pleased to hit upon a play that might be alternated with occasional programs of her inimitable character sketches and one-actress plays. Maybe that will come about, after her present tour is ended, some time about the first of June—according to present plans and the evidence of the booking sheets.

Asked when she ever found time in the daily round of her busy life, in and out of the theater, to write her witty books and get her una-dramas on paper, Miss Skinner admitted to a strange quirk. She does all of her writing on trains and in hotels, while on tour. That would include even her "Dithers and Jitters," latest volume of the Skinner humorous sketches not long off the presses.

But No Writing!

"On my Long Island place," she says, "I have a delightful little cabin, down by the water's edge, that was designed as a workshop. Every time I go there, I think to myself, 'this would be a splendid place to write.' So I gaze at the water and day-dream and wait until I get on a train or in a hotel room to do any writing at all. I never yet have written a word in the cabin."

Since he has not been on a Washington stage since his costellar appearance with Maude Adams in "The Merchant of Venice," many seasons ago, it is pleasant to report that Miss Skinner describes her distinguished father, Otis Skinner, dean of the American theater, as looking, at 80, like a man in his middle sixties. Miss Skinner quite obviously feels that she is fulfilling something of her father's wishes, as well as her own, in reappearing on the legitimate stage and temporarily abandoning the form of one-actress entertainment that made her a unique figure in the annals of the playhouse in this country.

Like Katharine Cornell, Helen Hayes, the Lunts and other first-flight stars of the parent theater, Miss Skinner is not lured by the golden temptations of the cinema. She cherishes memories of more than one opulent Hollywood offer, but cherishes quite as much, I think, the personal point of view that made it possible for her to decline them with thanks.

Java No Inducement

"There may come a time," says she, "but not quite yet. The promise of 'third or fourth billing' and a world audience, including Java, somehow didn't attract me. Third billing in Java seems just a trifle less important than my present top billing in my own United States. It may not be a 'world audience,' but at the moment it seems to satisfy me completely."

That is the way Cornelia Otis Skinner is—one of the most gracious, most perfectly poised and most versatile artistes now appearing before the American public. And she doesn't object to "una-drama," "mono-drama," "solo-drama" or any of the other pat designations of the strictly individualized form of entertainment she devised. The only descriptions over which she is able to summon no enthusiasm are "monologist," which she thinks sounds a little stuffy; "reader," suggestive of Friday afternoon in the grade schools and social evenings on Main Street, and "diseuse," which she abhors because as often as not it comes out in print "disease!" Ye gods!

And never take a tip—either on the track or in the theater. I know. When the name of "John Cromwell" cropped up in the cast of "Candida," the immediate suggestion was of the John Cromwell who has acted and directed on the stage and screen since goodness knows when. Others chipped in their praise of his handicraft. So we wrote a Sabbath piece about him. But that is not at all the John Cromwell who appears with Miss Skinner in "Candida." This chap is a young fellow no older than the role of Marchbanks, which he impersonates in the play. Furthermore, he is no relation to the John Cromwell we thought he was—forgetting for the moment Marchbanks' age. The only ameliorating consideration in our consciousness of an utter aberration is that this same thing has happened to the younger Mr. Cromwell before—on Miss Skinner's word.

The half-hour visit with Miss Skinner was not the only notable incident of a perfect Tuesday afternoon in spring. Immediately preceding it had been the preview of Shirley Temple's latest picture, "The Little Princess," opening at Loew's Palace tomorrow. Executed entirely in the most equisite Technicolor, "The Little Princess," it seems to me, cannot fail to be accepted as the most adult and most thoroughly engaging stellar vehicle in which its prodigious young star has appeared. Adapted from the Frances Hodgson Burnett story, it may get just a trifle "sticky" at times, but, in the main view, it is extremely palatable diversion, aimed at all ages. There will be a review—you hope not—on Friday morning. And watch for that other prodigious youngster, Sybil Jason. What a job!

"James Roosevelt," a radio executive states at the Versailles, "will make his first sponsored broadcast soon. It's being arranged now" . . . "Yes, it's true," Susan Hatch, the debutante, confides at Armando's, "Enzo Fiermonte—my Enzo—is coming back to America in two weeks."

1 a. m.: "Look, there's John Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury," a ringsider whispered at Fete's Monte Carlo. "He'll be back at the Capitol by Wednesday, because the President is expected to announce his new tax policy that day. Taxation won't be increased—or decreased. But it'll all be less complicated, if that's consolation" . . . "I'd rather be able to strum those songs like you do than be known as a humorist," Robert Benchley tells the guitarist at Le Ruban Bleu . . . "But that wouldn't be a fair exchange," the lady replies. "I already know two very funny stories—but what do you know about music?" . . . "Alexander Woollcott is so devoted to murder mysteries," Richard Himber reveals at the Rainbow Room, "that he's on his way to California to see David Lampson, who was acquitted of the charge of murdering his wife" . . . "I saw this picket parading in front of an empty store," Jackie Osterman relates at the Little Club, "and asked him what's the idea. 'Sh,' he answered, cautiously, 'I got a scoop.'"

"EVERYBODY—against Harold Ross."

3 a. m.: "The Foreign Relations Committee will meet Wednesday," Senator Pepper, of Florida, declares at the Stork Club. "This world needs two things: (1) an international tribunal, to adjust all legitimate national aspirations. After all, the world's boundaries are not static. And (2) we need an international group of what we used to call, in the old days, Vigilantes—to stop all international brigandry" . . . "I love you for the way your father-in-law, Machado, entertained me in Cuba," Peggy Joyce tells Gen. Jose Obregon . . . "Don't you love me for myself?" Obregon protests . . . "Oh, no, you're a married man," Peggy reminds. "I never love married men. I just adore 'em."

4 A. M.: "Dick Rodgers, the song writer, gave a party Sunday night," one of the guests relates at El Morocco. "Edgar Bergen was there and entertained the way he likes to—without Charlie McCarthy, but with a dummy made of his fingers, adding cuff links for eyes, reddening one knuckle for a nose, and a kerchief for a hat" . . . "Martha Dodd got some unofficial squawks from the State Department," an editor reports at the Havana-Madrid, "because of the cracks she makes in her book, Through Embassy Eyes. She left for Mexico" . . .

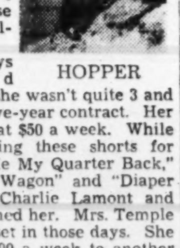
5 a. m.: "I saw the Marquis de Cuevas, Rockefeller's son-in-law, and he's in a helluva fix," a socialite informs at N. T. G.'s. "Not only does he need an eye operation but he's also got trouble with his legs" . . . "Life Magazine offered to devote a full page, if Billy Rose would pose in a bathing suit, being judged by a lot of girls," a pulicist states at the Onyx. "The caption was to be 'The Worm Turns,' so Rose made a short, subtle reply to Life—'Drop dead.'"

6 A. M.: "Yes, dear—yes, I know that on March 4 you wrote that 'Confidential cables point to March 15 as the most decisive day in Germany's history' . . . Yes, I know that Hitler marched into Prague on March 15 . . . So what, Mr.-Know-It-All? So you forgot to file your Income Tax Report."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 21.—The lawsuit Jack Hays is bringing against George Temple, Shirley's father, for $1,000,000 and an accounting of Shirley's earnings from 1934 to 1937, looks as though it might be a very serious affair. When two former district attorneys, Ring, of Madera, and Gallagher, get behind a case they're not fooling!



HOPPER

It was Hays who found Shirley when she wasn't quite 3 and put her on a five-year contract. Her salary started at $50 a week. While she was making these shorts for him: "Give Me My Quarter Back," "Pie Covered Wagon" and "Diaper Ann" it was Charlie Lamont and Hays who trained her. Mrs. Temple wasn't on the set in those days. She was lent at $100 a week to another studio. Six months later she went back to that same studio for $1,250. Quite a record, even for Hollywood.

George Putnam starts his new publishing company in a few weeks with "The Man Who Killed Hitler," written anonymously, but from one on the inside. Yes, Hitler will be sent a copy. If George survives, his second book will be one written for children by 7-year-old Marrianna Lester. She lives on St. Miguel Island, comes only once a year to the mainland and has seen one movie.

The dinner Dr. Millikan sponsored for the All Nations Boys Club at which Mr. Herbert Hoover spoke so movingly, was one of the most successful groups ever assembled in this town. Our motion picture producers were conspicious by their absence, but Joe E. Brown made a fine speech. Was glad to see young Doug Fairbanks among those present, also Eddie Robinson, Walt Disney and George Arliss. This is a movement every adult person should join.

Katharine Hepburn doesn't need Hollywood. When she opened her new play, "Philadelphia Story," in Boston, all Back Bay society turned out dressed as though for the opera. Understand Howard Hughes will produce it as a picture.

Some of our publicity boys could take a lesson in politeness from Jimmy Roosevelt, who calls personally on the phone and says, "Hello, this is Jimmy calling." He's just been decorated with the Order of the Crown by the Belgian government, also honored by the Dominican Republic. Both orders approved by Congress. Yes, Jimmy's got it, and I mean courtesy.

A little late, but comedian Eddie Foy, jr., is well on his way to being discovered. And why not—he comes by it honestly. In "Secret Service of the Air" and "Women in the Wind," he was swell.

Good thing Janet Gaynor's back in town. In her absence, Adrian dressed his gloom in black suits. No their romance is not in status quo—but blooming, thank you!

Howard Hickman, who plays Ashley's father in "Gone," rushed over to Vic Fleming on the set and said. "Stop those extras from holding hands." "What wrong with that?" asked Vic. "What's wrong?" yelped Hickman. "In those days holding hands was a serious business. Why my mother refused to see Ulysses S. Gran't brother after his first visit because he put his hand on her shoulder. And if she hadn't—what I might have been!"

Hedy Lamarr joined Gene Markey for lunch in the Cafe de Paris yesterday. Gene had several beautifully groomed females at his table when his wife walked in wearing burgundy slacks, a long red fox coat and high-heeled shoes. Joan Bennett set a fast pace in smart dressing when she was Mrs. Markey. Hedy will have to do better than this.

The Eddie Robinson's Supreme Court subpena for their son's birthday celebration Saturday was something. Two people fainted from shock when they received them, but that didn't affect the 100 children present. They had a floor show, three clowns, a mammy singer, riding ring with a dozen ponies, and just missed getting Gene Autry. Quite an eyeful seeing our young generation grow up.

Royalty Toils In Extra Ranks

You need an Almanach de Gotha to keep up with Hollywood these days, what with the movie sets swarming with as many titled personages as you can find outside the Court of St. James.

On the Paramount lot, for instance, there are no less than four members of the Old World nobility before the cameras today.

Seated with Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray at the table on the "Cafe Society" set is the Baroness Heidy von Massburg, daughter of a distinguished Austrian nobleman and cousin to the Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne of vanquished Austria. She plays the part of a society girl.

Serving the baroness is Walter Theile, now an American citizen. Before his emigration to the United States, this man who portrays an humble waiter was, himself, a notable figure in the night life of Berlin and other European capitals. Then he was Count Walter Erich Theile of Germany.

Playing a minor role in "Hotel Imperial," in which Isa Miranda makes her American debut, is the heir to the throne of the Austrian principality of Bukovina and to a 100,000-acre estate in Egypt. He is Count Arthur Walter Cernitz, son of Baron Johann Venceslas.

In a bit part in Claudette Colbert's new picture, "Midnight," is the Count Stefenelli von Prenterhof and Hohenmaur. He, too, is one of the Hapsburgs.

Action-Packed Film Opens at Metropolitan

'Secret Service of The Air' Concerns 'T-Man' Sleuthing

"SECRET SERVICE OF THE AIR," Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play based on material compiled by William H. Moran, featuring Ronald Reagan, John Litel and Ila Rhodes, with James Stephenson, Eddie Foy, jr., Rosella Towne, Larry Williams, John Ridgely, Anthony Averill, Bernard Nedell, Frank M. Thomas, Joe Cunningham, Morgan Conway, Raymond Bailey and John Harron. Directed by Noel Smith. Reviewed Tuesday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

A pulp magazine angle of front page news, in the tried and effective bang-bang manner, is "Secret Service of the Air," which opened yesterday at the Metropolitan Theater. Not a second is wasted in this speedy tale of facts supplied by William H. Moran, former head of the Secret Service Bureau of the Treasury Department.

With no pretense to be a polished and mighty epic, it resembles one of the popular "Crime Does Not Pay" series, stretched to feature length. The gang, out to make easy money—"and quick"—is nabbed through patient perseverance by the law.

Ronald Reagan is the invincible hero in a cast of competent, if not famous players. He is the reliable pilot of the Clipper flying between the Orient and California, anxious to break into a life not quite so humdrum. And since winging between Asia and North America is one idea of humdrum, you can pull out all the stops and figure what our lad might consider interesting.

Story of Alien Smuggling

Followers of the headlines and Government investigation don't have to be told that alien smuggling is a business that pays high dividends down on the Southern California border. A shot of the Secret Service office in the Treasury Building, just down the street, reveals that the officials have decided to put a stop to this flying of aliens over the border and a friend remembers Ronnie's urge for a try at being a "T" man. He is framed on a startling charge and given as cell-mate one of the suspects of the gang. You have to be able to take it to be a "T" man!

How to escape from a road gang being one of the favorite stock situations of the fans for this type of film, it is called into play and the former aviator is able to gain a contact with someone on the outside. Next he makes overtures to the smugglers and eventually becomes their buddy.

With never a dull moment, Reagan clips into two bang-up fist fights, pilots a crate that looks as though it wouldn't get to Bethesda, and manages to keep a perfectly balanced tongue in his mouth when he reports to his superior Secret Service officer to discover the room loaded with a dictaphone and signs from the boss about how to act mum.

Love Interest Incidental

While there is a love interest to the plot, it is confined to the opening and closing shots. Eddie Foy, jr., handles the comedy, which also has that thrown-in-for-good-measure atmosphere about it. In a suspenseful scene he almost pulls the lever that lets the bottom out of the plane, a device used by the smugglers to remove human evidence when the trail gets too hot. John Litel and James Stephenson have lovely roles and Ila Rhodes and Rosella Towne handle the minor feminine assignments.

The first views of the papal coronation; "Music in the Morgan Manner," with Russ Morgan and his orchestra, recently heard on Thirteenth street; "A Day at the Fair," a Terrytoon, and an income tax session with the Grouch Club support the action-jammed feature.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 21 (I.N.S.) Coming to the screen—and we hope sooner than "Gone With the Wind"—will be "The Ordeal," by Neville Shute, the Book of the Month Club's April selection. You've guessed it—David Selznick bought it from the galley proofs and will star Alan Marshal, the good looking lead in "Dramatic School." And why not? Alan has ability and deserves a chance.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The story deals with the demoralizing effects of air raids on civilians. Shute, you may remember, is also the author of "Kindling," and his second book already has an advance sale of 105,000 copies. These galley proof buys are increasing in Hollywood where the struggle for material continues fast and furious.

Something was started for Polly Ann Young when Twentieth Century-Fox lured her away from her happy fireside and gave her a job in "Alexander Graham Bell" with Sister Loretta. Polly Ann, although still happily married, is going to continue the movie career she gave up when she married Carter Hermann three years ago. She now has a role in "Wolf Call," at Monogram, with Movita and John Carroll. Movita, by the by, can hardly tear herself away from Mexico, where Jack Doyle, Irish pugilist and recently deported from the U. S. A., holds out. Movita denies strenuously that she and the one-time husband of Judith Allen, and favorite boy friend of Millionheiress Delphine Dodge, are married. But there are sill people who insist that a Mexican ceremony was performed.

Surprising that Hedy LaMarr is eager to play the heavy in "The Women," and she was really happy at the Zanuck part, when Hunt Stromberg complimented her on her tests. But there is a heated discussion among the M-G-M executives as to whether Hedy's first on the home lot should be in a second lead even though she herself is willing to play second fiddle to Norma Shearer. I have an idea that she will, instead, be starred in "Guns and Fiddles," announced among the year's new productions. This is a substitute for "Lady of the Tropics," with Robert Taylor still slated as her co-star, and Miliza Korjus singing the beautiful gypsy songs of the Budapest that was. The story by Walter Reich and Sam Hoffenstein has a Hungarian locale.

All the reams of publicity Dorothy Lamour received on her shapely figure won't do a her a bit of good in "Disputed Passage" for she wears all her clothes in the Lloyd Douglas movie, parking her sarong for the time being. Dorothy remains in New York two weeks longer than Edgar Bergen and Don Ameche for personal appearances, and goes into "Disputed Passage" with Robert Preston and Akim Tamiroff as soon as she returns. Today Frank Borzage was signed by William LeBaron to direct and perhaps after his bad break with 'I Take This Woman" which had to be shelved, Paramount, for whom he has done most of his work, will be luckier for him.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Johnny Mack Browns are expecting their third child; Jascha Heifetz, who said he wouldn't finish the Goldwyn movie for $100,000, has changed his mind and returns here April 5; Princess Brinda Kapurthala, an extremely fascinating woman, is the house guest of Countess Dorothy Di Frasso; Willie Wyler returns from Sun Valley not to see "Wuthering Heights" again, but he says because he wants to see Mrs. F. D. R. who will be at the preview; Mrs. Leslie Howard and her daughter, Leslie Ruth, land Thursday and remain in New York; Myrna Loy, well again, home from the desert; Mrs. Mimi Levee is on her way to Europe to adopt two refugee children; Johnny Weissmuller trailed back in town tonight, going directly to that new home he built in Brentwood; Billy Bakewell and Sari Maritza, the former Mrs. Sam Katz, a Brown Derby twosome.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 21.—We are reliably informed that the Philadelphia Athletics will not win the 1939 American League pennant. Travelers from Fort Myers, on the tip of Florida's West Coast, bring us assurances that the A's not only will not win the pennant, but that they are, perhaps, the worst-looking ball team ever to disgrace the American League.

POVICH

Of course, if the A's happened to finish in seventh place, this season, that would be an improvement, inasmuch as they finished eighth last year. But with the Athletics there is no sign of improvement. The evidence is that they are weaker. For a reason easy to put one's finger on—$25,000 paid them by the Cincinnati Reds—they sold one of their two big league infielders on the club, William Werber.

The venerable Connie Mack will go to the post on April 17 with a team comprised of one big league outfielder, two big league pitchers, a minor league catching staff and four bush league infielders. That is essentially the same team which beat the Browns out for last place by the comfortable margin of two full games in 1938, except for the absence of Werber.

Fans Disgusted With Mack

We may be wrong about estimating Mack's outfield at one big leaguer. The one certified gent is, of course, big Bob Johnson, and his extra-base bat. They may have another big league outfielder in Wally Moses, who has been hanging around the fringe of stardom for four years, but has never quite made good. And they may have a third in Sam Chapman, the football All-American from California, who faded to a .259 batting average after an impressive debut with the A's.

Philadelphia folks are pretty well disgusted with Connie Mack, we hear. They know he has been making money on his club in recent years, and they don't like the way he persists in selling what few stars he has owned. Two years ago, for the first time, one of the Philadelphia newspapers waged a bitter campaign against Mack's parsimony. Last year that same paper's correspondent reported that Mack was paying Buck Ross, one of his bright young pitchers—a fellow who beat the Yankees three times in '37—only $3,000 for the season.

This year apparently, Connie Mack has made two serious attempts to bolster his team. He paid the Chattanooga club $25,000 and two ball players for Outfielder Dee Miles and he bought Infielder William Lillard from San Francisco for $35,000. But neither of those purchases are showing any signs of redounding to Mack's benefit. Miles, who was given two trials by the Nats, and flopped, is refusing to report to Mack until he gets a slice of the sale price. And there is great doubt that he would help the club anyway. With the Nats he had speed but could not hit or play the outfield.

Lillard's Knee on Trial

Lillard comes to the A's with an impressive .335 average in the Pacific Coast League, but he comes to the A's also with a bad knee. Mack bought him conditionally. If his knee fails to respond to treatment, he will send Lillard back to 'Frisco and reclaim his $35,000.

If Lillard makes good with the A's he will probably be the only big leaguer in Mack's infield. Dick Siebert, the lad Mack bought from the Cardinals last year, hit for a puny .284 average and if he plays first base he will be playing first base only because Mack has no other first baseman.

He doesn't have a second baseman either, as big leaguer second basemen are measured. Dario Lodigiani, the spring sensation of last season, proved in later months that he couldn't play second base. He was too slow. This season Mack has moved him over to third on the theory that a slow third baseman is better than a slow second baseman.

Lillard will play shortstop for the A's. If he doesn't, Lamar Newsome will. Newsome, the smallest player in the major leagues, is as capable a fielding shortstop as there is extant. But he does not hit. Especially he does not hit since he was beaned in an ill-advised night exhibition game two years ago when his skull cracked. Ever since he has been wearing a rubber helmet beneath his baseball cap.

Too Many Sacrifices

The fellow Mack has been playing at third base is one Bill Nagel, up from Little Rock, where he batted a meagre .271 last year. The third base job is between Nagel and Lodigiani, and neither of them are apt to throw any terror into any pitcher.

Now take Mack's pitchers (he'd probably thank you), there isn't a gent in the entire crew who won more games than he lost for the A's last year. George Caster's 16 wins against 20 defeats were commendable, and Buck Ross won 9 and lost 16 with a sore arm. Those two are apt to do very well this year. But the others would not have weakened the A's if they had graduated. The chief thing they learned last year was to duck instantly after letting the ball go.

A fellow traveler from Fort Myers aptly described the A's when the new sacrifice fly rule was mentioned. "That's the trouble with the A's," he said, "they hit too many sacrifice flies with nobody on base.

On the Line

With Considine

New York, March 21.—At last the door of the clinic opened and the reporters, who had been pacing up and down the outside room, burning up one cigarette after another, suddenly stopped and tiptoed in.

"Was it a boy," one of them asked, in an awed whisper.

CONSIDINE

Tony Galento sat at the operating table in a pair of purple shorts. His hairy tidal wave of belly dilated unhappily and his scar-traced face, scrubbed and scented for the great occasion, was lined with the ordeal of the physical examination he was undergoing—to see if he was fit to fight Joe Louis for the heavyweight championship.

The tubby battler was caught in the horrid tentacles of a sphygnomanometer, or blood pressure device, as it is sometimes called. He was strapped around both biceps and one thigh, and it depressed him. "They put me in an electric chair and tuned in on Station WEAF," Tony said unhappily.

In a moment the room filled up with nine photographers and 21 reporters, which caused Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, who was being heavily jostled about, to cry, "where is the press?" The photographers were banging away merrily by this time, the little spasms of light illuminating Tony's sober battle-scarred face. Five doctors—William Walker, Charles D. Bles, Morris Beyer, Robert Hechler and Jules Posner—fluttered back and forth around the ample chassis of the challenger, tightening up the bolts on their apparatus.

Defer Decision Until Friday

A photographer climbed up on a divan to get an angle shot and the general pinked him in midair. "Don't stand on that sofa!" the general barked. "You broke it down the last time you were here." This caused the photographer some embarrassment—photographers being supersensitive—so he screwed a new bulb in his camera, aimed it at Tony and then refused to fire away until the general moved out of focus. "Get outta the picture!" the photographer said subtly.

They unstrapped Tony and announced that they couldn't reach a decision on his physical condition until Friday, though several of the doctors privately ventured the opinion that the fellow is in surprisingly good shape.

Private Bill Brown, the only noncommissioned fight commissioner, didn't join in the milling crowd of commissioners, deputies, flunkies, photographers and reporters who grouped around Galento as the great man pulled on the pants of a klassy kut suit. Private Bill sat on a hot radiator at the side of the room, stared coldly at Galento and said, "Well, I see he passed his first operation. He came through a haircut safely."

Before the press was admitted to the fateful clinic, Tony came face to face with an opthalmoscope and an electro-cardiagraph. He described the former as a spyglass, used for peering through his eyes into his into his brain He couldn't say whether they found anything.

He'll Knock Da Bum Out, Says Tony

The electro-cardiagraph is a lathe-like device, which was used some time back in Utah when the State firing squad bumped off a guy for playfully poisoning his mother-in-law's graham crackers. Tony hadn't heard about this, but he had a statement to make:

"I'll moider da bum. You guys bet your salary on it. I can't name da round, just now, but I know I'll knock him out." Tony looked around for an appropriate foil and started a punch for Cas Adams, burly heavyweight writer for the New York Herald-Tribune. "I'm going to change my style for this fight, too," Tony promised, thus revealing for the first time that he has a style. "Shorten my punches, see?"

Tony got some telegrams during the grueling examination. The fellow who hired him for a vaudeville appearance beginning next week wired "it was the shape you're in that got you a vaudeville contract. If you reduce we'll take off a buck for every ounce," he threatened. Sally Rand wired, "don't you mind, Tony. John L. was no fan dancer either."

Maurice Evans, the perennial Hamlet, wire a quotation from Shakespeare, pulled by the roots from "much ado about nothing." Tony was mystified.

"Who's this bum Evans?" He asked Joe Jacobs.

Post-A.A.U. Cage Tourney Nears Final

15-Year-Old Cager Sets Record With 19 Goals as S. E. Boys Down W. B. C.

The two unlimited favorites in The Washington Post-A. A. U. Basketball tourney, United Typewriter-Dapper Dans and Delaware & Hudson, came through their engagements last night at Eastern High gym, though one was forced to stretch its talent to win while the other breezed in easily.

Delaware & Hudson met the stiff opposition in Stouffers, winning with a final-quarter splurge, 42-33. U. T.-Dapper Dan came through its clash with W. W. Chambers with little or no worry, 54-19. In the 120-pound engagements, Southeast Boys Club hung a 53-13 loss on the Washington Boys Club Trojans and Gonzaga Bantams barely eked out a 27-21 victory over Leland Junior High. In the only 145-pound game of the night, Alexandria B. C. defeated Georgetown B. C., 38-26.

Delhuds Hard Put for Victory Over Stouffers

A hard-fighting Delaware & Hudson unlimited team forged ahead of Stouffers in the final quarter to win, 42-33, in one of the best basketball displays Post-A. A. U. fans have witnessed. Though behind, 22-15, at the half, the Stouffers' quint, made up of former American University stars, managed to knot the count three times in the third period, only losing when Delaware & Hudson applied the steam later on.

Gerald Burns, a former All-High player at Western, took down scoring honors with eight field goals and a foul shot. "Barty" Bartlett and Hugo Shulze paced the losers with 11 points apiece. Two Delhud dependables were ejected from the game on personals in the final quarter, and several others were guilty of three fouls when the final gun went off.

Chambers Five Beaten By U. T.-Dapper Dans

Ollie Tipton, former Business and Central High cager, paced the United Typewriter-Dapper Dan combination to a smashing 54-19 victory over W. W. Chambers in one of the two featured heavyweight scraps. Tipton tallied 21 points to bring his total in three games to 58 and keep himself in the running for the individual scoring trophy of the tournament.

The victory brought the Dappermen into the semifinals of the annual Post-A. A. U. basketball war. At half-time they had already compiled a 28-16 advantage that left little doubt of the eventual winner. Billy Mitchell chipped in with 14 points in the winning effort, while Colley, of the losers, managed for seven points.

Alexandria B. C. Easily Defeats Georgetown, 37-26

Alexandria Boys' Club, a 145-pound delegation from across the river, opened up in the first few minutes of its game with Georgetown B. C. and won without a great deal of trouble, 37-26. At half time the Virginians had almost doubled the score on their opponent, 22-12.

It was Harry Philips, forward, and Jim Flinchum, guard, who supplied the high scoring for the victors, although every man on the team contributed something. "Red" Purell, guard of the losers, was the best floorman and scorer for his team, sinking three field goals for six points.

Johnson, Lynch Clash For Indoor Net Title

The indoor tennis championship of Washington will be the title conferred on the winner of a match between David Johnson and Hugh Lynch when the two net stars meet tomorrow night on the Central "Y" court. Johnson survived a semi-final scrap with J. Morris, 6—4, 6—0, to enter the finals of the Y. M. C. A.-sponsored affair. Lynch earned the final berth with a 6—2, 6—4, beating administered R. S. Tiger Homers Beat Cards; Reds, A's Win

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21.—The Detroit Tigers rallied in the eighth inning to trim the St. Louis Cardinals, 7 to 3, here this afternoon. It was the Redbirds fourth defeat of theft Grapefruit League season. Pete Fox tied the score with a home run to start the rally. Then Bill McGree went to pieces, allowing three singles and walking a run over.

Hank Greenberg and Frankie Croucher also hit homers for the Tigers, and Terry Moore placed one over the left field wall for the cards.

Pytlak, Indians' Catcher, Quits Club After Argument

New Orleans, March 21 (AP).—Catcher Frankie Pytlak collected his personal possessions and walked out of the Cleveland Indians' training camp today. Manager Oscar Vitt said he and C. C. Slapnicka, Tribe vice president, were involved in an argument last night with Pytlak.

Pytlak declared "I'm not going to stand for this," but would not say to what he referred, Vitt said. The Tribe manager added that Pytlak declared he wouldn't sign a contract. President Alva Bradley said earlier Pytlak agreed to terms, at least orally, before he came to camp a week ago.

"Pytlak said he wanted to catch every inning of every exhibition came and every game during the season," declared Vitt. "At first I thought the whole thing was a joke and you could have knocked me off the chair with a feather when I discovered he was serious."

Today Pytlak cleared out his locker with a remark "I'm getting out of this lousy racket."

Four Young Pitchers Virtually Eliminated In Intra-Club Battle

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 21.—Washington's regulars won the championship of Tinker Field today, beating the rookies for the second straight time, 9 to 6.

Four rookie pitcher virtually eliminated themselves from consideration by Manager Bucky Harris, in the informal intra-squad contest. Joe Thuman, Kirby Hayes, Forrest Brewer and Bob Overstreet pitched themselves back into the minors.

If any of them impressed Harris it was Hayes, the former Chattanooga lefthander, who held the rookies to five hits and two runs in the four innings he worked. The others were hit freely, particularly the left-handed Brewer, who was blasted for four runs in the first inning by the regulars.

Two Heroes

The ball game produced two outstanding heroes. One was Jake Early, who as a pinch hitter, delivered a rifle-shot home run into right field with two men on base in the fifth inning against Rookie Bob Overstreet. The other star performer was Charley Gelbert, who collected three of the regulars' 12 hits, including a two-bagger.

The game was the Nats' last intra-squad contest of the year. Tomorrow the Nats move to Daytona to begin a series of spring training games that afford no breathing spell until the season opens.

Dutch Leonard and Ken Chase will make their 1939 pitching debuts tomorrow when the Nats oppose the Minneapolis Millers of the American Association.

Travis, Bluege on Sick List

The Washington team will be without the services of Shortstop Cecil Travis and Utilityman Ossie Bluege. Travis is confined to his hotel room here with a mild attack of influenze and Bluege is nursing a swollen and discolored finger, suffered when a ball he was fielding in practice today took a bad hop.

Tony Scores With Antics And Prattle

Five Physicians Give Boxer 'Once Over;' Official Statement Will Be Made Friday

(Picture on Page 22)

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 21.—A battalion of physicians looked over that great American institution, Roly Poly Tony Galento, today to discover if he was in good working order to tangle with Joe Louis the night of June 28 in Yankee Stadium for the world's heavyweight championship.

The rigid physical examination was made at the request of the New York Athletic Commission which wants to determine if the barrel-shaped gent from New Jersey is "organically sound" before it sanctions the bout. And, although the five physicians refused to make their report public, Tony did it for them.

100 Per cent "Perfect"

"They told me I'm 100 per cent okay," he revealed. The doctors, however, explained they couldn't give out their report, that it was up to the commission to make it public. The commission, through Chairman John J. Phelan, said it would not make the announcement until Friday, by which time it expects to have on hand the returns of all the various tests to which Tony was submitted.

"We won't want to give you this thing piecemeal or in parts," the general said. "We'll wait until it's all together and give it out in one piece."

45-Minute Session

Tony was on the mat for 45 minutes with the physicians. They examined him from the bald spot where he wears his hat down to his size 12's. When it was over, the verdict was a draw. The physicians confounded Tony with their apparatus and medical diction, but the beer keg that walks like a man scored heavily with his antics and prattle.

For instance, the physicians wanted to take Tony's blood pressure.

"Now, Mr. Galento," one explained, "we're going to apply a sphygmomanometer.

"Hay, stop given' me the double talk," Tony retorted.

Then the doctors used the electrocardiograph, an instrument to determine the "current" in the heart. It consists of plates applied to each arm and one leg, all wired to a square black box in which the graph is recorded.

A Lot of "Bunk" to Tony

"What is this?" Tony asked as one of the physicians turned a dial on the machine. "First you put me in the electric chair, then you tune in the radio."

"Well," he was told, "we want to prove you're organically sound, as the commission asked."

"Oh, is that all?" Tony reached into his pocket, drew out a roll of bills. "How's that? Doesn't that prove it?"

Afterward, Tony reported on the Louis affair.

"I'm gonna hit Joe with a left hook and belt him right outa that ring," he roared. "No, I don't know how many rounds it'll be. I won't say. But it'll be just as soon as I hit him with the first hook."

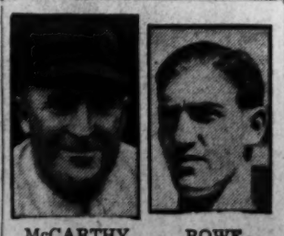
Lou Gehrig Only Yankee 'Question Mark' This Year

Detroit 'Weak Spot' Lies in Outfield; York Regular Catcher

(This is the first of four articles by Harry Ferguson, United Press sports editor, on the American and National League baseball clubs.)

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21.—The extra base hits are whistling off the bats of Murderers' Row here in the lair of the New York Yankees and in a few days Manager Joe McCarthy will start North with another powerhouse ball club. Nothing, it seems, except fire, flood or epidemic can prevent him from running away with another American League pennant.

It is a typical Yankee club that McCarthy has put together this spring—a tight defensive outfit with power to burn and with plenty of classy young ball players to step in for any veteran who falters. There is only one question mark on the club, Lou Gehrig, the big first baseman, who has slowed down to a walk and may be near the end of the road. If Gehrig fails to last out the season, Babe Dahlgren, a utility infielder, or Tommy Henrich, an outfielder, will take over.



McCARTHY ROWE

Charley Ruffing, Lefty Gomez and Monte Pearson again will carry the pitching burden. McCarthy expects Oral Hildebrand, obtained in a trade with St. Louis, to be of some help and a good second-line defense is made of Wes Ferrell, Johnny Murphy and Bump Hadley.

McCarthy is neck deep in top flight outfielders, including Joe DiMaggio, Tommy Henrich, George Selkirk and Jake Powell, who have already won their big league spurs. In addition, he has Charlie Keller, Walter Judnich and Joe Gallagher, all up from Yankee farms and fighting to stick in the big leagues. Bill Dickey, best receiver in the business, again will do most of the catching, with some help from Buddy Rosar, the rookie star from Red Rolfe, Frank Crosetti and Joe Gordon are fixtures at third, short and second, and no manager could ask for anything more.

There are indications that Cleveland, Boston and Detroit who, with the Yankees, made up the American League first division last season, will take improved clubs into the race, but none has bettered itself enough to dethrone McCarthy's maulers. There is some flaw on each of the clubs that probably will mean the difference between the pennant and a place behind the Yanks.

Manager Del Baker of Detroit has a great infield with Frank Croucher, rookie shortstop, in line to be one of the stars of the future. But he is going to depend on Rudy York for the most of his catching and York is not a polished ball player now. The outfield is uncertain, with Pete Fox being the only man sure of a job. Roy Cullenbine, Chet Laabs and Fred Walker will fight it out for the other two jobs. But the biggest blackest question mark is the

Black River Wins Tropical Feature by Nose; Pays $11.30

Faust Second In Thrilling Stretch Duel

Charlton, Ashcropt Ride 1st and 2d Horses Respectively; Meade on Cruising

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 21.—Black River, 7-year-old son of Black Servant, flying the silks of Mrs. R. Sullivan, turned in one of his occasional good races here this afternoon and lasted to win the featured fifth event of six furlongs by a nose. A. G. Tarn's Faust, closing like an express train, just missed getting up in time. He earned second money by three lengths over F. Beloin's Cruising.

Six sprinters faced the starter, with Cruising a slight choice over Faust. Black River, beaten off in a race won by Faust a few days ago, was favored by an 11-pound switch in the weights today and showed smart improvement. He paid $11.30 and finished in 1:12 4-5.

"Chuck" Charlton and Jimmy Ashcroft, the apprentice lads who are staging a thrilling battle for the riding leadership of the meeting, rode the first and second horses, respectively. Charlton took the lead with 18 winners by virtue of this score, one more than Ashcroft can boast. Don Meade, who is closest on the trail of the two youngsters, was astride Cruising.

Meade rushed cruising into command at the break. Black River, showing an improved brand of speed, shot after the pacemaker, but was blocked trying to steal through on the inside. He was taken around Cruising on the bend and collared the favorite after turning for home.

SARANITE bettered her position on the inside rounding the turn, but was caught in tight quarters entering the stretch and held on well to hold WORTHING safe. The latter, always well up on the outside, faltered when the real test came. HUSTLE ALONG finished in good style. MR. BUDDY could never reach serious contention.

DIAVOLO CLIFF broke forwardly, went well up while saving much ground and, closing with determination, wore MAETRAN down in the final drive. MAETRAN, off alertly, went in close pursuit of the leader, came to the outside entering the stretch, responded gamely when clear and took command, but was unable to withstand the winner's challenge. MELISSA, pinched back after the start, gained steadily while saving ground and outlasted EQUISTAR in the final drive. EQUISTAR, prominent on the outside rounding the turn, was carried out by MAETRAN on the stretch turn and changed strides. He came again, but could not get up. DARBY DIENST, hard ridden all the way, finished stoutly. MOUNTALOON, quickest to begin, displayed keen speed for three furlongs, but stopped badly.

SCHLEY NURSE improved her position gradually after entering the backstretch, came around the leaders turning into the stretch and drew out through the stretch to win under pressure. ONCAVE bettered her position steadily on the outside to midway around the lower turn, then taken to the outside, closed stoutly under punishment and shook off GOODWINE in the final drive. GOODWINE, prominent contender all the way, assumed a short lead entering the stretch, but faltered. TOWN CAR, hustled to the front going to the first turn, showed the most speed, but faltered in the last furlong. HERMOSILLO closed some ground in the final three furlongs. BLACK RIVER, going in much improved form, forced a fast pace in the early running while racing on the inside, was taken to the outside rounding the turn, moved up rapidly and raced CRUISING into defeat and, responding gamely when the final test came and outlasted FAUST. The latter, going well up early, gained steadily after going a half mile on the outside and was wearing the winner down at the end. CRUISING, away forwardly, showed the most speed, but faltered in the stretch run. MARFEU closed with a belated rush on the outside. DULCIMER, a forward contender the entire trip, saved ground entering the stretch, assumed what appeared a winning lead, but was unable to stave off the winner's challenge. MOTLEY, going closer up than usual under stout restraint, responded gamely to punishment and outlasted BERTILLON. The latter, also outrun early, moved up steadily after leaving the backstretch, but was blocked on the stretch turn and finished between the leaders. MO, always a factor, hung in the final drive. AIR EDDY, a prominent contender on the inside early, was shuffled back rounding the turn, came again on the inside and outlasted COUNTRY LASS in the final drive.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Tropical Park, March 21.

Dear Al.

I understand that my friend, Clem McCarthy, is doing a stage skit at the Capitol Theater. A fine Irishman, this Clem. Always liked him but he made himself a pal one day when the boys were discussing great horses of the last ten years. The group went through Seabiscuit, Equipoise, War Admiral and others and then Clem brought up the subject Aneroid. He said that he believed Aneroid belonged in any mention of good horses. Of course that was right up my alley. Before I could get a word in edgewise about John Manfuso's horse, Clem took all the words right out of my mouth. He related what a well-mannered horse Aneroid was and that he had burning speed. He also said that Aneroid was an unlucky horse generally due to poor handling in the saddle. Clem is of the opinion that the son of The Porter would have won even more races than he did if the boy had not rushed him off his hoofs. While Aneroid did have fine speed, Clem has always maintained that he should have been handled strictly as a come-from-behind proposition at long distances. He believes Aneroid will be a big success in the stud and, like Mrs. Bennings' lovely boy, he can hardly wait until some of the Little Aneroids come along. I hope you Washington sports fans and theater-goers have been doing right by Clem. I'm glad to hear the Johnny Adams, the West Coast saddle champion, is going to ride in Maryland. He won't be East in time for Bowie but should get down to business at both Havre de Grace and Pimlico. I understand Joe Hernandez, the ace announcer at Santa Anita, has been signed by Alfred Vanderbilt to take care of the public address system and daily broadcasts from Pimlico at the spring meeting. Joe has done a swell job in the West Coast and he was the first announcer to use "There they go!" instead of the usual "They're off!" In answer to an inquiry, only winners count in making the standing of jockeys at a certain meeting. The tracks generally announce that the prize for the winning jockey will be a $500 watch. After the meeting the jockey generally takes a check for the amount. However, at the recent Hialeah meeting, Don Meade, winner among the veterans, and Apprentice Charlton were given watches set with diamonds.
BILL.

First race—Dinner Jacket, with Meade to do the riding, looks like the goods in the day's opener. He appears capable of carrying the 114-pound assignment to victory in company of this sort. Grand Light and Icy Wind may complete the money bracket. Toby Tyler is quoted at 20-1 in the line and might jolt the company.

Second race—General Howes is one of those rare Florida horses who runs regardless of short price. He seems nicely placed in this and I'm going to string along. Bucket Head, probably named for Clocker Mike, has plenty of speed and is dangerous. Chance Watch may make the grade in the cash circle.

Third race—Maechance seems to have an edge over the juveniles gathered for this sprint. Joe Renick is a veteran with a knack of riding 2-year-olds and probably will get this one home on top. Head Master and Nutty will be ready to do some serious running.

Fourth race—Patsey Begone and Jockey Meade have done everything asked down here in the palm country and if they blow this purse the wolves should put up a howl. Terpsichore and She's Right are in light and may cause the top one some trouble.

Fifth race—Neighbor, tossed into action here with 103 pounds, should perform in excellent manner. Young Charlton will do the booting and I like the spot. False Point will have Meade up and a modest impost. Co-Sport is fit and a factor.

Sixth race—Seventh Inning earns his oats in this brand of talent. Breaks off the rail and I expect Apprentice Ashcroft to get him to the wire in time to collect the chief award. Bonny Clabber is in good shape and will be close. Courtney's Pet for the show.

Seventh race—Sun Victor may awake under the guidance of Meade. Gets only a moderate weight assignment and I'm going to take my chances. White Hot is at tops and will be in there knocking. Prince Derek can improve on that last.

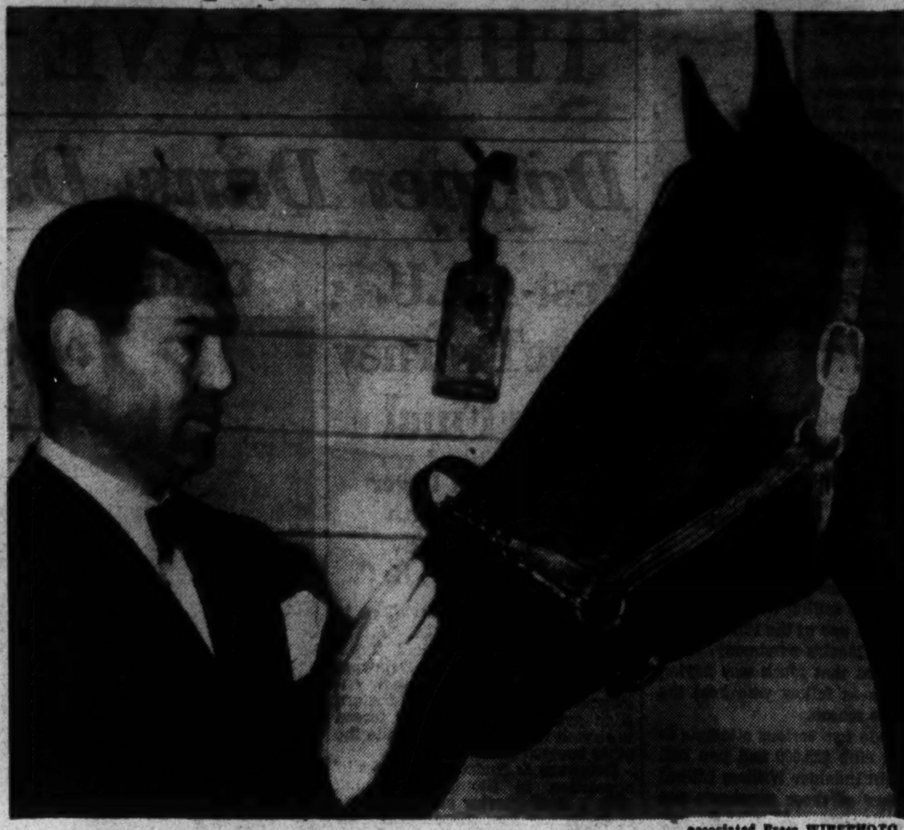
Eighth race—Would Dare and Bow and Arrow will battle it out in the day's finale and I prefer them in the order named. Alpenglow may take down the minor portion of the purse.

Best bet—General Howe.

To Pass Up Ky. Meetings

Tropical Park, Fla., March 21 (AP).—Samuel C. Nuckols, who served in the steward's stand for many years on the Kentucky tracks, will not be in his old job this year. He has notified the officials that he will be unable to serve this year due to his appointment at Narragansett Park and at Cleveland, Ohio. It will be the first time in years that Nuckols has passed up racing in his home State.

Jack Dempsey Plays Role of 'Good Samaritan'



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Jack Dempsey, in Louisville, Ky., to act as a referee at a wrestling match, takes time out to visit Churchill Downs and the 1939 Derby nominees quartered there. Black Bun from the stables of Mrs. B. Franzheim, attracts his attention because Black Bun is suffering from a fever. Jack said he would attend the Derby and remarked: "It looks like El Chico"

Md. Race Solons Pass Rule to Make Ringers Impossible

Baltimore, March 21 (AP).—Action to make it more difficult to substitute one race horse for another was taken by the Maryland State Racing Commission today.

The commission suggested that horses be allowed into track grounds through only one gate and that the gateman be instructed to take this information as the horses entered:

Owner and trainer of horses; license number and owner of van carrying horses; name of van driver; number and names of horses; where shipped from; number of stalls assigned to owner and date and hour of admission.

On Fishing

The best flies for use in Maryland and Virginia waters have always provided argument. We believe it would be impossible to get any two anglers to agree in their choice of the six best. Therefore keep in mind the fact that those given here are mostly a personal choice.

ACKERMAN

There are two that are found more consistently in fly boxes than all others, the Black Gnat and the Royal Coachman. The first a standby, for dark days as well as bright, reversed and normal, with spinner and without, and even for night fishing, at times seems to be irresistible. It has a black chenille body, black hackle and dark gray wings.

Time-Tried Favorites

The Royal Coachman with a peacock herl body with a red band, brown hackle and white wings, so far as we know represents nothing in the insect world, yet this time-tried fancy fly is one of the really consistent fish getters. With this fly we might also mention the Professor, another fancy fanwing, that on account of the great amount of red in its makeup is the probable cause of arousing a trout's dander until he strikes. The Professor has a yellow body with gold ribbing, scarlet tail, brown hackle and gray speckled wing.

Another favorite of the years is the Cahill, with gray wool body, brown hackle and wings and tan and brown speckled tail. For us, however, it is not one whit better than the McGinty, a fine fly for Maryland streams, with black and yellow body stripes, scarlet speckled tail, brown hackle and brown wings with white tips. The Yellow Sally, tied to represent the greenstone fly so prevalent over our streams in May.

And the Duns, the Pale Watery and the Evening, the latter seemingly the best around here. The Gren Drake with olive green body and black ribbing, yellow speckled tail and wings and brown hackle, appears to be coming into greater favor in the last several years. And it would be impossible to go on without mention of the Ginger Quill and Midge; the Silver Doctor and Paramachene Belle, which are often used here and work to good advantage, but are far better on nothern waters.

Hard to Classify

But if one was guided by the flies seen he would be in a bad way, for the trend nowadays is to tie your own, and without a pattern. Strange as it may seem, it is remarkable the results obtained with such flies. In addition the flies found in the sport stores these days are often hard to classify, for the streamer flies that have come into such widespread use during the last three years are every shape, shade and color. Usually tied with imported maribou, the rainbow hues are in imitation of the colors of the minnows found in the waters in which they are fished.

These streamer flies are usually fished down, or down and across stream, but there are times when they can be better fished across and up or even upstream. When you find the fish are consistantly missing, then is the time to try another variation.

And that is a good thought to leave with you for today, don't hesitate to try anything at least once, no matter how strange it may seem, or how unorthodox. It is the angler who tries that day after day who brings home the trout.

7,200 Watch Orioles Defeat Sea Gulls in Rough Ice Contest

Atlantic City Loses, 5-2, To Baltimore

Fist Fights Enliven Battle at Riverside; 2 Draw Penalties; Woman Is Injured

By Lewis F. Atchison.

To the discordant strains of flying fists, chattering sticks, and the hoarse roar of 7,200 cash customers, the Baltimore Orioles rang down the curtain on Washington's three-match hocked campaign last night, bowling over the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, 5-2, at Riverside Stadium.

It was the wildest exhibition of the ice game yet witnessed here. From the second period on there was nary a dull moment as the boys went to it, sticks, tongues and fists. Adding to the excitement was the injury of a rink-side patron, a lady, who suffered a bruised head when an errant puck sailed out of the enclosure.

Ned Vitarelli, Baltimore's fiery little right winger, was involved in two fist fights that would have won any boxing fan's admiration. He had it out with Herb Allen in the second period in a melee near the Oriole's goal, and came to blows with Bill Cairns in the third.

Cairns later drew down a rich chorus of cat calls upon his head by almost hacking off Vitarelli's right leg with a vicious slash of his stick later in the period. The overt act netted a five-minute period in the penalty box.

Aud Tuten, Baltimore defense man, clinched the match for his mates with two goals in the final period and assisting in the manufacture of a third netted by Riley. Herb Foster, speedy and flashy Sea Gull right wing, was the seaside sextet's outstanding offensive threat, scoring its final goal at 18:15 of the final period, after receiving credit for an assist on Vernon Buckles' second period score.

George Boll, burly Baltimore defenseman, broke the scoring ice with a long tee shot at 8:40 of the second period. The Birdmen tallied again at 18:35 of the same period when Frank Ripley took a relay from Riley to Fritz and drove it through Goalie Courteau's stick.

Hockey Hints From Heated Baltimore-Sea Gull Match

The above shots are typical of the action last night at Riverside Arena, where the Baltimore Orioles and Atlantic City Sea Gulls closed the District's brief, unofficial season with a heated display of sticks and tempers. The Orioles won, 5-2, chalking up their third consecutive victory at Riverside. In the above photo Maurice Courteau, Sea Gull goalie, has just blocked the puck (extreme right) in a spirited mix-up near the cage. Standing over Courteau is George Boll, of Baltimore, while Jim Allen, of Atlantic City, is at the extreme right. The lower photo shows Baltimore's goal tender, Omar Kelly, prone on the ice with the precious puck cupped in his hands after making a brilliant save. Ned Vitarelli, Baltimore, is at the left foreground, while Pat Wilson, a teammate, is on the right.

'B' Softball Teams Likely This Year

A number of Class "B" leagues may be added to the D. C. Softball Association if the suggestion made last night in the first meeting of the body this year is put into effect.

A representative of Interior Department made the suggestion, and the 20-odd league managers present eagerly discussed its possibilities. Before the annual get-together of the whole body next Tuesday, it will be put to motion effect and a vote will be taken.

The move was seen as a big step toward enlarging the membership of the association. Regular play between Class "B" teams could be started, with the winners of the league championships allowed in the Class "A" play-offs next August. In this way, even a Class "B" team might earn the trip to the national tournament in Chicago which goes to the city championship.

Commissioner Winfree Johnson, who presided last night, announced the new ruling of the National Softball Association, allowing men to score from third base the same as in baseball. The change, he said, would doubtless raise scores, but it would put a much-needed curb on pitchers when a game became hotly contested. Wild pitches would be less frequent. It would also put a premium on good catchers with strong throwing arms.

With the exception of the treasurer's report, which claimed a surplus of $179.79 in the association coffers, the only other discussion concerned umpires. John Asher, secretary of the Umpires Association of Washington, caused a mild bit of contention when he announced a new method of paying officials.

Tenceforth, the officials, pay will be turned over to Asher at the start of a given period.

Patty Berg's 73, NewMark, Tops In Mid-South

Southern Pines, N. C., March 21 (AP).—Patty Berg, women's national golf champion, pulled away from the field today with a second record smashing round in the midsouth Women's 54-Hole Tournament.

The Minneapolis girl carred a 73—10 under par—to go with her 75 yesterday for a 148, six strokes ahead of her nearest rival, Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, N. C., from whom Miss Berg won the national title last year.

Mrs. Berg's 75 yesterday established a women's record on the Southern Pines Country Club course. And her 73—two above men's par—cracked that mark.

Mrs. Page's play was consistent, but she could only match her yesterday's 77 for a 154.

Mrs. Leo Walper, of Washington, D. C., carried a 79 which, with her 89 of yesterday, gave her third place with a 268 in the field of more than 60.

Tied for fourth with 171s were Mrs. Thomas Rudel, of New York; Mrs. Karl Scheidt, of Morristown, Pa., and Alliene Hoover, of Thomasville.

Mrs. Meckley Loses, 2 and 1, To Dettweiler

Augusta, Ga., March 21 (U.P.).—Blonde Helen Dettweiler, defending champion from Washington, D. C., today defeated a fellow townswoman, Mrs. Betty Meckley, 2 and 1, in the first round of the ninth annual Augusta Invitation Golf Tournament. Miss Dettweiler meets Jean Bauer tomorrow.

Mrs. E. L. Howe, Philadelphia, beat Grace Amory, Glen Head, N. Y., 3 and 2. Isabel Ogilvie, Augusta, downed Ruth Haley, New York, 1 up. Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, Mo., professional, defeated Mrs. Mildred Prunaret, Boston, 5 and 4. Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., won by default of Mrs. A. R. Jube, South Orange, N. J.

B'nai B'rith Finance Titlists

Firing in two bowling leagues came to an abrupt halt last night at Lucky Strike alleys, Finance winning the pennant in the United States Housing Authority League despite the loss of three straight to Project Planning in the final night's rolling, and B'nai B'rith winning in the Distributors' League with a final sweep over District team.

Office Service finished in second place in the USHA division, closely followed by Project Planning. Runner-up and third place finisher in the Distributors' League were Carstairs and Brentwood, respectively.

Judge Curran Presides Over Dramatic 'Trial-Like' Baseball Meeting

This picture was taken at the height of a 2½-hour session of the National Baseball Federation last night in the courtroom of Judge Edward M. Curran. Judge Curran called the meeting to determine why six leagues withdrew last February from the federation and formed their own union, the District Amateur Baseball Association. Although there was considerable wrangling among some 60 league proxies, managers, sponsors and players little was accomplished toward effecting harmony before the annual federation tournament here next September. Seated in front of Curran is J. Francis Reilly, secretary of the N. C. B. F. and an assistant corporation counsel of the District who climaxed the meeting by asking for the resignations of Vic Gauzza and Bill Fiester, presidents of three of the "outlaw" leagues. The gentleman, perplexedly scratching his head at Curran's right, is Walter Maloney, president of the N. C. B. F.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21. Do you know of any one who is completely and utterly contented with his lot in life? I do. He's a baseball player.

VIDMER

Not just any baseball player, you understand, for most of them have their troubles, trials and tribulations.

Some are young rookies, fresh from the minor leagues, with the big opportunity beckoning, and they are worrying themselves sick that they won't make the grade. Some of them are aging veterans who realize the end of their careers are close at hand and they are fearful of the day when they must stop playing. Some have financial problems, some domestic difficulties, some just don't like to play ball.

But Joe DiMaggio has everything his heart desires, and at the moment he is, I believe, the happiest, most contented young man alive. He admits it.

"Why shouldn't I be?" he grins boyishly. "I'm only 24 years old. I have my health, three successful years in my profession behind me, 10 or 11 better years ahead. I've made enough money already to take care of my folks and I have a business that is booming and will take care of me when my playing days are done."

Indeed, why shouldn't Joe be the happiest man alive? He grew up on the waterfront of San Francisco, the son of an Italian fisherman. His dad and his older brothers, Tom and Vince, dragged a living from the sea. They worked hard, rising at daybreak and setting forth in their boat. When they returned with the day's catch they would yell for Joe and it was his job to clean up the mess on the craft.

But as often as he could Joe would duck the distasteful job. He couldn't be found, and when at nightfall he returned, his shoes scuffed at the toes, his trousers torn, his hands skinned, and confessed that he had been playing baseball, his dad would howl with anger.

"Dad thought I had been playing football," Joe recalls. "He couldn't speak English and he didn't know the difference between the two games. He thought it was something where you bucked the line and made tackles.

Yet it did make quite a difference in the life of Joe DiMaggio. When he was 17 he was selling papers on the streets. But one day he was fired, and then he turned to baseball for a living. As a result, the fishing boat of Papa DiMaggio puts forth to sea no more, but Papa and Mama DiMaggio sit quietly and peacefully in a home that Joe has given them and pass their declining years reading of their son's glory and greatness.

"Dad knows all about baseball now," Joe chuckles. "He argues about hit-and-run plays and sacrifices and everything."

His older brother, Tom, who used to help Papa DiMaggio on the fishing boat, now oversees the running of a $100,000 restaurant on Fisherman's Wharf. Joe provided that also.

"It's doing a great business," Joe explained. "We've had it only two or three years—I can't remember which—and we've got back all but about $15,000 of the original investment. You see everybody who comes to San Francisco generally wants to see three things—the Golden Gate, Chinatown and Fisherman's Wharf. They all come to my place to eat and we get a fine clientele."

District A.A.U. Semifinals On Tonight

Outstanding Novice Bouts on Menu at Joe Turner's Arena

The kids who fight at the drop of a hat and for the sheer joy of smacking another guy on the kisser will be at it again tonight at Turner's Arena where the annual District A. A. U. tournament moves into the fourth week of fisticuffing Seven novice class semi-finals and eight senior bouts are on the program.

It is an attractive platter that will be set before a discriminating public, what with Jim Brady, Chester Morris, Billy Kekeris, Tony DeToto, Bernie Morris, Tom Beardsley and George Pickeral scheduled to display their talents.

Meets Bill Nolan

Morris stablemate of the better known Jimmy DeChard and a knockout artist in his own right, opposes Bill Nolan, veteran National Guard heavyweight, in the final and probably feature bout of the evening. Nolan boasts more experience than Frankie Mann's youthful prospect, but Morris appears to carry enough dynamite to off-set this disadvantage. Morris confidently predicts he'll win by a kayo, while Nolan has an entirely different outlook on the affair.

Bernie Morris, scrappy little Georgetown Boys Club featherweight, opposes a formidable opponent in young Billy Colbert, popular Washington Boys Club ace, and if he gets over him will have a good chance of taking the title. Morris had his hands full last week with Alex Alagarkis, Colbert's clubmate, and the latter feels that he's got an excellent chance of stopping his highly touted opponent.

Outstanding Bout

One of the best bouts of the evening is expected in the lightweight division, wherein Tom Beardsley, the one-man Terrapin A. C., faces Al Gray, of Merrick. Beardsley has shown to advantage in his two appearances thus far, and is a strong favorite to take the crown. Gray, however, is not only an able ring general but pretty stiff puncher and it would not be surprising if he flattened the College Park youth.

Billy Kekeris, whom many claim is another Steve Mamakos in the bud, faces Clyde Hayes, Washington Boys Club, in still another engagement that should keep the crowd in an uproar.

The Brighter Side...

By Damon Runyon

A woman can have a dozen children and still go on doing a right slick job of housework every day, so we do not see anything remarkable about the performance of an old race mare down in Florida that a fellow writes us about.

RUNYON

This race mare's name is Panorama. She is 8 years old and has had two foals that have both been to the races, and winners.

Panorama was bred by Hal Price Headley, the Kentucky turfman (they pronounce it "Heedley" down there). She is by Supremus out of great mare called Chacolet. Headley won the Dixie handicap with Chacolet. He ran Panorama in a $1,000 claiming race in Florida one day and Hirsch Jacobs, the famous Brooklyn trainer, clamed her and still has her the last we heard.

If memory serves, Breckenridge Long, another well known Kentucky turfman, had a mare called Shennanigan, or something like that, trained by Max Smart, which had a foal that ran in a race against the dam. Then there was a mare named Sunny Lass that belonged to the wealthy William Ziegler, owner of El Chico and Esposa, and other good horses, which raced after having had a foal.

Some trainers race, up to a certain stage, mares that are in foal. Well, there is nothing remarkable about that, either, when you consider the way the human family sometimes permits impending mothers to slave up to within a few hours of the event.

L. I. Grits Situation

Jack Hogan, a Sunnyside, L. I., fellow, read about grits as a breakfast tidbit in this column recently, and tore out, ravenously hungry, seeking same. He was sorely disappointed, because no one in his neighborhood knew what he was talking about, so he sat down and wrote us a letter telling us how his mother made grits, though it does not sound to us anything like the same dish we got down South. It sounds more like Pennsylvania scrapple, if you ask us.

"Clean half the head of a hog," Jack relates, "and put it in water and boil until the meat parts from the bone. Pick out all bone, and strain the water from the meat. Put meat through a sausage grinder, then take and cook enough oatmeal to equal the amount of meat. Take enough of the water left from the hog's head and mix in well the meat and the oatmeal.

"Not too thin—about as heavy as fresh cooked oatmeal. Season with salt. Put it back into a double boiler and stir until it cooks to a heavy mush. Pour the mush into a glass jar. Put the jar in a cold place until the contents become like headcheese. When ready to use, put the jar in hot water for a few seconds and the mush will fall right out. Slice into cakes about half an inch thick and fry in skillet with butter or lard until brown on both sides. Serve with butter and syrup or honey."

Nothing pleases a bar-tender more than to have his customers satisfied. When he gets an opportunity to recommend a rye—he's quick to lean to Ruxton. Why? Ruxton is distilled from 98% Rye Grain, from an exclusive old Maryland formula. What does that mean? Simply this,—in Ruxton you get a genuine rye flavor and a mellow, light-bodied smoothness that distinguishes Ruxton from other ryes. Man to man, the next time try Ruxton.

St. John's Five Leaves Today

Five Seeks First Title At Newport

Third Effort of Season May Bring Better Results Than Previous Tries

Though the rest of Washington's schoolboy basketball crop has checked in its uniforms and turned thoughts to baseball and track, St. John's continues determinedly in search of a tournament crown for 1939.

Beaten out of the South Atlantic tourney in the second round and unsuccessful in its defense of the metropolitan championship, St. John's leaves by auto early this morning for Newport, R. I., and the Eastern State Catholic invitation meet, which starts tomorrow.

This third effort of the Johnnies may be no more successful in a basketball way then the other two, but Coach Gene Augusterfer and his eight first-stringers look forward to a trip equaled only by their journey to Chicago last year for the Catholic prep title event. In fact, if the lads survive the round of entertainment planned in the Rhode Island city and manage to play ball at all, surprise will be general among Johnnie fans.

Plenty of Entertainment

A feature of the entertainment which will appeal to every Johnnie as he waits his turn to take the court will be the free admittance to movies which tournament officials have arranged. Tours around the Newport Training Station, Fort Adams, and the oldest steamship afloat, the Constellation, are also on the program.

For members of teams which have tasted defeat in the early rounds, a skating party will be staged Saturday afternoon. And Saturday night, after the last basket has been made, and someone or other is champion in the second renewal of the event, a huge banquet will be the reward of all participants.

Thoughts of the entertainment planned will probably take a back seat in the minds of Johnnie basketers today, however, as they travel to Newport, the hot-bed of social registerites. Mostly they will be thinking of the team they meet first. That is, Cathedral High, of Springfield, Mass.

Lucky in Draw

It is one of three Cathedral schools entered. One from Syracuse, N. Y., and another from Burlington, Vt., complete the list. The Johnnies were fortunate in falling into a bracket other than that in which St. Peter's High, of New Brunswick, N. J., landed. The latter is defending champion, and reportedly almost as strong as last year.

It is only the second time in four years that the Johnnies' first opponent, Cathedral, has entered a tourney outside its home town. The aggressor, however, holds the championship of schoolboy teams in Springfield, Mass., having run up a total of 21 victories and only five beatings this season. That nearly matches the record of the Johnnies.

That war in Europe is like a bum's elbows. Liable to break out any minute. And will never do anybody any good.

We don't like trouble but we'd like to see them fight and get it over with. They should either fish, chop bait or go ashore.

Those muggs over there are always rehearsing like barn players in Connecticut. Which gets so monotonous we would like to see them do something in earnest even if it's annoying.

Bantams Win Thrilling 27-21 Game From Leland

In one of the most exciting battles of The Post-A. A. U. play, Gonzaga Bantams, a 120-pound aggregation, came from behind to trip Leland Junior High in the final stages of the game, 27-21. The score was tied up on five different occasions throughout the stirring game.

Though the count had been deadlocked at 6-6, 8-8 and 10-10 in the first half, the Bantams were on the long end of a 14-10 score at intermission. A fast rally, in which Leland's Simmons furnished the punch, brought the team up even twice more, but it was unable to hold on. Gonzaga, under the influence of Bartram, Downes and Flynn, forged ahead in the closing minutes. Bartram and Simmons tied for point honors with 9 apiece.

New Mexico Cagers Here For Luncheon

The New Mexico Aggies ducked in and out of Washington yesterday, regretting that they would not have time to display their basketball wares to local fame. The Cowboys, who made quite a big hit in the national tournament at Madison Square Garden, were guests at a luncheon staged in their honor yesterday in the Senate restaurant by Representative John Dempsey. After a short sight-seeing trip, they departed.

Coach Jerry Hines, who renewed an old friendship with Dutch Bergman, the Catholic U. coach, while here, said that it was necessary for the team to return home at once, and that only the fact that the Aggies were held over in New York for the Roanoke game on Monday kept them from meeting the Dapper Dans in an exhibition on a Post-A. A. U. tournament program.

He said that the boys were "fed up" on basketball. Hines was reluctant to alibi for his club on its defeat by Long Island, but brought out the fact that the poor ventilation and smoke were factors in his boys tiring after holding a 20-to-10 lead at one stage of the game. His eyes sparkled, however, when the Aggies' victory over Roanoke in last Monday's consolation game was mentioned.

Hines said he hopes to bring another team East soon.

The session will be a preliminary and testing ground for the soft drink men. Final arrangements for the season, including schedule and rules, will be discussed Saturday night at the home of Manager Connie Wyche, 1500 Trinidad avenue northeast. New Orleans, March 21 (AP).—The New Orleans Pelicans of the Southern Association today scored their third victory in four games over the Cleveland Indians, 8 to 3.

Lake Charles, La., March 21 (AP).—Bill Nagel's fifth inning home run with two on clinched an exhibition game for the Athletics today in their 7-to-2 victory over Forth Worth of the Texas League.

The clout also might have clinched Nagel's claim to third base. Connie Mack was impressed, too, by little Joe Gantenbein's fielding at second and by Irving Bartling's batting and fielding at shortstop.

DeMaree Injured

Baton Rouge, La., March 21 (AP).—The first serious injury of the New York Giants training season put Frank DeMaree out of action today with a sprained left ankle and possibility of a slight fracture.

The former Chicago center fielder turned his ankle while chasing a double off the bat of Bob Seeds, his chief rival for the position, in an intra-club game. An X-ray was taken to determine the seriousness of the injury.

Medwick Refuses Offer

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21 (AP).—Vice President Branch Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals offered today to dig into his own pockets for an extra $500 if Joe Medwick would sign a contract, but the holdout outfielder refused.

It was $20,000, his 1938 salary, or nothing, so far as Medwick was concerned. The Cards have offered him $17,500, and Rickey's $500 donation would increase it to $18,000.

pitching. If Schoolboy Rowe can stage a comeback, things will look brighter for Baker. Tom Bridges, Vernon Kennedy and Roxie Lawson are among those on hand again. Paul Trout, up from Beaumont with a great record, looks good, but Fred Hutchinson, the $100,000 beauty from Seattle, has still got to prove that he has enough speed to stay in the American League.

Good "Long Shot"

Manager Joe Cronin's Red Sox, who finished second last season, might be a good long shot if you care to go along with Joe on the gambles he is taking at third base and in the outfield. Since last season he has traded Third Baseman Frank Higgins and Outfielder Ben Chapman in an attempt to strengthen his pitching staff. At third he will depend on Jim Tabor, who got into 19 games at the end of the '38 season. Cronin is counting heavily on Ted Williams, who hit .366 for Minneapolis last year, to join Roger Cramer and Joe Vosmik in the outfield. The Red Sox added Denny Galehouse, Eldon Auker and Jake Wade to the pitching staff during the off season, but Robert Moses Grove, the old fireball king, is the key man of the situation. If his ancient arm comes back, the Red Sox can cause trouble; if not, they may wind up fourth. Gene DeSautels and John Peacock make up an adequate but not brilliant catching staff.

Vitt Needs Players

Give Manager Oscar Vitt of Cleveland a second baseman and a shortstop and he might go places. Jeff Heath, Roy Weatherly, Ben Chapman, Bruce Campbell and holdout Earl Averill (unless he is traded) will take care of the outfield. Hal Trosky is the first baseman and Ken Keltner will cover third. One possibility for second base is Oscar Grimes who hit .307 for Milwaukee last year, but if he fails to come through Vitt will have go back to bad news Hale. Lyn Lary is only a fair shortstop and the Indians will be weak in the middle of the diamond if they have to go along with him. Pitching is the Cleveland tower of strength. Bob Feller seems set for a great year; Mel Harder and Willis Hudlin are good for at least 30 games between them and there is a chance that Johnny Allen may come roaring back to glory.

Here's a guess on how the first division clubs in the league will stand when autumn comes around: New York, Cleveland, Boston, Detroit.

Bolling Field, Army Medicos In Tourney Struggles Tonight

Two Army teams will battle against elimination tonight in two battles that promise keen action on the program of the Post-A. A. U. championship being conducted at the new Eastern High gymnasium. Army Medicos, who turned back the Georgetown University Intermurals in their first tourney appearance, tackle the much-improved Regal Clothiers.

Bolling Field, a finalist with the Medicos in the U. S. Government League titular play-off, will face the formidable Police Boys Club five. The winners of these clashes will advance to the quarter finals.

In addition to the pair of unlimited struggles, those who have been following the girls' games will witness a meeting of the Mount Rainier and Agriculture Department.

Agriculture, winner of The Post Trophy in the Community Center League, scored a 21-16 victory over the Highlanders in its first tournament game. Tonight Mount Rainier stands in the way of the Aggies meeting Rockville's sensational sextet Friday night in the girls' semifinals.

The fourth game on the program involves a meeting of the St. Martin's and Takoma Junior Firemen fives in the 145-pound class. St. Martin's, one of the favorites for the title in their division, downed the Police Boys Club, 55 to 22, in a first-round game. The Takoma club is making its first tournament appearance.

Bolling Field, with Joe Zwisle showing good form, turned in an impressive victory in the first round, downing the Eckington Athletic Club, while Police Boys Club fought its way to a 40-to-35 triumph over Railroad Retirement Board in an extra-period thriller.

The Regal Clothiers-Army Medicos game should be a sizzler. The Regals surprised even their most partisan followers in the Middle Atlantic play at the Heurich gym by beating out all local teams to reach the finals. Previously Regal had downed Cal's Valet in the first round of the A. A. U. tournament.

Army Medicos have some stars to toss at Regal tonight. Elliott, former Yale player, and Burns, little but a big point maker, will be ready to carry the brunt of the attack.

The usual nominal admission price of 25 cents will be charged at this four-game program.

Stinson Placed Poet's Home on Sale, Court Told

Druggist Tells Of Sedatives Ordered By Rich Widow

Testimony about quantities of sedatives ordered by Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson, 54, since 1933, yesterday startled Justice Luhring into commenting that if the figures were correct "she must have taken the medicine by gallons."

David L. Maxwell, druggist, then explained that he thought some of the records from which he was testifying were duplicated and promised to return to the stand today with everything straightened out.

Mrs. Stinson, plump and prosperous poetess, is suing to annul her marriage to Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, lawyer-artist engineer and writer, to get back the money she said she had given him in 1937, when she claims he drugged her and married her for her fortune. Her side of the case may close today, after eight days of testimony, to be followed by an equally replete presentation of Stinson's claim that she did the courting and insisted that he take the money.

Miss Laura Harlan, realty operator, told Justice Luhring yesterday that Stinson once tried to sell the Crounse home at 2419 Wyoming avenue for $450,000. Stinson told her to refer possible buyers to him, Mrs. Harlan said, because his wife was too ill to handle business. Mrs. Harlan thought he set the price too high.

A party Stinson allegedly gave while his wife was in a Baltimore hospital was described yesterday by Helen Thornton, colored maid, who summed up her impression in these words, "I never saw such a class of people in this house before."

O. L. Varela, assistant treasurer of National Savings & Trust Co., testified that more than $87,000 was deposited in a bank account of Mrs. Stinson's while her husband held her power of attorney to sign checks. He cashed checks for $7,598, Varela said, and Mrs. Stinson signed checks for $11,488, of which $3,000 was payable to Stinson.

How One Woman Lost 20 Pounds of FAT

Lost Her Double Chin—Lost Her Prominent Hips—Lost Her Sluggishness

Gained A Shapely Figure and the Increase in Physical Vigor and Vivaciousness Which So Often Comes With Excess Fat Reduction.

Thousands of women are getting fat and losing their appeal just because they do not know what to do.

Why not be smart—do what thousands of women have done to get off pounds of unwanted fat. Follow the sensible, safe pleasing food lists inside of a jar of Kruschen. Then for a wholesome beneficial aperient effect on liver and bowels and for a mild helpful diuresis of the kidneys—take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning. Keep this plan up for 30 days. Then weigh yourself and see if you haven't lost pounds of ugly fat.

Just see if this doesn't prove to be the surprise of your life and make you feel like shouting the good news to other fat people. And best of all a jar of Kruschen that will last you for 4 weeks costs but little. Don't miss the little daily dose. (Adv.)

Sears, Roebuck Net $4.18 Per Share For Fiscal Year

Chicago, March 21 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co., today reported consolidated net income for the fiscal year ended January 31 was $23,354,363, or equal to $4.18 a share of stock outstanding. This compared with $30,828,248, or $5.58 a share, the previous year when profit was the highest in the history of the mail order concern.

Net sale stotaled $501,676,644, a decrease of 6.6 per cent compared with the 1937 sales of $537,242,400, which were the largest the company ever had.

The figures do not include undistributed net profits of unconsolidated insurance companies amounting to $217,545 for the year ended December 31, 1938, nor net loss of $176,390 for the companies the preceding year.

Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board, in his annual report to stockholders, said the company's sales declined sharply the first half of the year and that a small increase began to take place in November.

Cotton Futures Close Lower

New York, March 21 (AP).—Speculative support dried up in the cotton futures market today, leaving closing prices 4 to 11 points net lower. The market followed a downward slant throughout the day, following a lower opening in the face of a better trend at Liverpool, Foreign selling developed early, then liquidation by Southern spot interests and co-operatives.

With exports of the staple the lowest in many years, traders found food for thought in the United States' reprisal action taken against Germany. Ring speculation veered to the possibility of similar moves against other totalitarian states and their action on outward movement of cotton.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures stumbled lower today in the wake of weakness of grains and the downturn in cotton. Closing prices were 1 to 4 points net lower on sales of 136 lots. Speculative interest was light. May closed, 6.89; July, 7.03; September, 7.14; October 7.17. Crude oil buyers lowered their bids ⅛ cent in the Southeast and Valley to 5¾ cents, while Texas quoted 5½@5¾. The reductions had no effect on the market.

Stocks Advance as War Tension Eases High-Grade Shares Make Best Gains

New York, March 21.—Modest recoveries ruled in most markets today both here and abroad, the buying giving the appearance of short covering and careful purchases made on the basis of a slight relaxation in the European political tangle. After the long decline a minor comeback was in order. Stocks showed an average advance of 0.62 points, the Government bond list and domestic corporate issues did better and foreign exchanges were quieter.

Trading on the big board of only 682,610 shares furnished a cue as to the lack of enthusiasm engendered by rising prices. A number of the pivotal stocks turned in gains of 1 to 3 points, and they did better from the opening, closing generally not far removed from their highs.

As has been the case for the last few weeks, financial affairs have vibrated to the turn of events abroad almost to the exclusion of every other influence. The fact that there can be a rebound such as that of yesterday, even though there was a lack of bullish enthusiasm, indicates that markets would seek higher levels if only there could be some confidence of peace abroad. This is the big "if" of the moment, and it is the element that has given us our dragging markets and our uncertainty of the recent past.

It did not take any sensational bullish news from abroad to facilitate today's gain. The clouds remain just about as black as before, but the indications that the backbone of the democracies is stiffening and that Russia may back them provided a better selection of news that had been boiled up of late.

While little attention is being paid to domestic business news, there was an indication of greater commercial activity that deserves mention. There was a rise of $21,000,000 in commercial borrowings and the improvement was well distributed throughout the country. It was the biggest increase of the season and total loans and investments are now at a new high since October, 1937.

Copper Shares Strong

Copper shares stood out in today's trading with interest centered about the turn of events in Chile, where discussion has opened in the Chilean Senate on a new proposed tax. The chairman of the Senate finance committee was reported to have favored a plan to kill the copper export tax and substitute in its place a tax on the profits of copper companies. The dispatches from Santiago did not reveal the probable size of such a tax, but the copper shares were strong. Kennecott was the most active, advancing 1⅛ and Anaconda was up a point. Nickel turned in a gain of 1½ and both American and United States Smelting were higher.

General Motors was the most active stock of the day, closing up ⅝, Chrysler added 1¼. Steels were in the forefront, United States Steel gaining 1⅜ and Bethlehem about a point. Republic was active but unchanged. Aviations reflected the prospect of more orders, the most active being Curtiss Wright, up a small fraction.

Glenn Martin, Boeing and United Aircraft made small gains. American Telephone recovered 3⅜ after its recent weakness and gains of other representative leaders include Allied Chemical, 2; duPont, 2½; National Distillers, 1⅜; Standard of New Jersey, 2¼; Union Pacific, 2, and Westinghouse, 2.

In accordance with the slight ease in tension abroad, wheat prices softened, closing down ½ to ⅝ cent a bushel. Cotton also was easier, ended off 4 to 12 points.

Foreign Bonds Advance

Listed bonds turned upward today with some vigor, and foreign issues led the rally just as they led the decline of last week. Prices of high grade foreigns advanced 1 to 3 points as fears of an immediate general war diminished. United States Treasury issues showed good fractional gains, while the high grade domestic list was stimulated by the excellent reception accorded the new National Distillers debentures. Speculative domestic bonds were in modest demand. Turnover in all issues was only $5,637,000.

May Option Falls To 66¾, Lowest For Three Months

LEAVE THEM SOUND JUDGMENT, TOO!

Among the things besides experience which a successful man acquires during a busy lifetime, is sound good sense.

This intangible is not the least of his assets, by any means, yet it is the one which is normally most difficult to bequeath. Failure to provide a substitute for it may result eventually in extreme financial difficulty for the ones you love.

By choosing a competent executor and trustee, in whom he has confidence, to represent him after he has gone, he has automatically avoided this risk by employing the sound judgment of those trained to conserve property of others.

American Security and Trust Company, with nearly half a century of specialized administrative experience, is well equipped to carry out the plan which your own good judgment may dictate.

Why don't you and your attorney accept this as a cordial invitation to discuss the matter with our Trust Officer.

Coppers, oils and mining issues held firm and there was considerable Amsterdam buying of Unilever. Foreign bonds were quiet and transatlantics firm.

Paris—The bourse closed firm today, although trading was small. Rentes advanced 90 to 245 centimes and Bank of France was up more than 400 francs. Suez Canal finished over 500 francs ahead, while Royal Dutch sold 100 francs higher.

Liverpool—Wheat futures broke sharply today to close 1¼ to 1½d down. Renewed Argentine pressure and limited demand from United Kingdom millers caused general realizing sales. Government Shows Surplus For February

$183,000,000 in Month Deficit a Year Ago Was $155,000,000

New York, March 21.—The Federal Government's financial statement for February was a surprising one in view of the fact that it disclosed a surplus instead of the usual deficit, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute, today. Ordinary receipts were larger than in February last year, and partly offset a substantial increase in expenditures. The apparent deficit was consequently not much larger than a year ago.

The deficit this year was more than offset by trust account receipts which were unusually heavy. This resulted in a surplus of $183,000,000 in February this year as compared winth an actual deficit of $155,000,000 in the corresponding month last year. Despite this surplus the Government continued to borrow money to the amount of $227,000,000. As a result of this borrowing and the surplus, the Treasury balance was increased by $410,000,000 during the month. The debt reached a new high record of $39,859,000,000.

Since there was a surplus, the Government's financial operations in February contributed to deflation. The deflationary effect was even greater than indicated by the surplus, since $161,000,000 of expenditures represented funds which the Government invested in its own bonds. The fact that the deflationary character of the Government's financial operations in February did not result in any particularly deflationary movement, indicates that other factors making for deflation were dormant. This was an encouraging development, since it suggests that deflation might not develop immediately even if the support of Government deficit-spending was removed.

Cotton Spinning 87.8% of Capacity

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that the cotton-spinning industry operated during February at 87.8 per cent of capacity, on an 88-hour week, two-shift basis, compared with 85.7 per cent during January this year, and 66.6 per cent during February last year.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, March 21 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Wools were moving very slowly in the Boston market today. Most buyers were adhering to a waiting attitude pending the outcome of opening of the fall season goods. Occasional small transactions afforded the only basis indicating the trend of prices. Average short French combing length fine territory spot wools of the old clip have been sold, in original bags, at 62 to 63 cents, scoured basis. A few small transactions have been closed on country-packed mixed-grade lots of three-eighths and quarter blood bright fleece wools at around 26 to 28 cents, in the grease, to be delivered East in May.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Mr. F. W. Reichelderfer,
Chief Forecaster, U. S. Weather Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Reichelderfer:

According to the newspapers you recently announced that the words "probable and "probably" would be almost completely dropped from future weather reports, on account of new instruments that almost always call 'em right. Now in a world like this, with so many big things to worry over, this may not seem important, but I'm a sentimental old waffle and it hurts me to think of a weather forecast with no "probable" or "probably" in it anywhere.

I've been a great weather report reader, man and boy, and I've grown used to "Tomorrow, probable showers" and "Rain tonight, probably clearing Tuesday" etc. It was the uncertainty that made me like 'em. If I planned to go on a picnic day after tomorrow and the weather forecast said "probably heavy rain" it depressed me, but it didn't floor me. That word "probably" saved the situation. It was a great comfort. It was a handmaiden of hope. It conveyed the idea that nothing was certain, least of all the weather, and that the weather man, like as not, was as cockeyed as ever.

Likewise if there had been a terrific cold spell and I'd just about had my fill, when I turned to the weather forecast and read "Very low temperatures will prevail tonight and probably for the next several days," the wording didn't make me jump out of the window. I could always fall back on "probably" and hope the forecaster was wrong again.

I don't think you have any idea what a solace and comfort to millions of Americans that word "probably" has been. It buoyed up the people's spirits to feel that the Weather Bureau was just a human and could make mistakes like anybody else.

And now you are quoted as about to drop "probably" and "probable" from weather forecasts! You will just say "Colder tomorrow"—just like you was giving an order or announcing an edict by some dictator. With millions of children looking forward to Sunday school picnics this summer, you will simply announce "Rain all day," with no shadow of doubt anywhere. Well, I think you must have been misquoted. Nobody can be as wrong as a weather man, but I don't think even a weather man can be as wrong as all that.

You take my advice, and keep in doubt about the weather. Even with an instrument that makes no mistakes, you had better not be too positive. There will be a real uprising in this country when the Weather Bureau starts saying "positively." And I don't mean probably.

Yours for continued uncertainty,
ELMER TWITCHELL.

Can You Remember——

Away back when countries just staged mimic wars for the newsreels?

Now that they are giving a swing version of "The Mikado" how about calling it "The Mikadee-ho"?

Papa Dionne will go to Toronto with the quints to see the King and Queen. But George and Elizabeth had better be careful or he will load 'em up with hamburgers, hot dogs and soda pop and postcards.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

Notations: Forest Ranger Urban J. Post, a hero of the dreadful Blackwater Forest fire in 1937, is in Washington for a brief visit—and still trying to forget the holocaust in which 7 of the 45 fire fighters under his direction lost their lives. Post, a quiet, steely eyed man, finally came out of the fire-swept mountains with deep burns and the horror of knowing that 15 men, all told had died in the flames and that 38 were injured. . . . Proof of the crowded conditions in Federal establishments is reflected in the plight of the Council of Personnel Administration, which at the moment cannot find a room large enough to accommodate its members—numbering slightly more than a score—when they convene in solemn session. It appears that the council may have to move into privately owned quarters. . . . This column has quoted civil service authorities to the end that approximately 750 persons took the C. S. examination for principal informational representative, a spot paying $5,600 a year Now persons have phoned in, saying that such a number of applicants is incredible. As many as 65,000 take exams for messenger which scarcely pays bicycle expenses. The National Press Club took the principal informational representative exam en bloc, one caller reminded. . . .

Among the vehement denials of the week was one from the Agriculture Graduate School that any course on marriage was being sponsored there. The nearest thing to it is a course on psychology, it was said. And the Agriculture Bureau of Engineering denies the rumors that it has discovered an electrical trap that will catch any and all chicken thieves. The nearest approach to this was the attention the bureau gave to those electrified wires that cattlemen use in the West to keep their stock in bounds. And these same electrified wires are used by trappers in the northern United States to keep marauding bears from their doors . . . Just how sticklish the Government is about its stenographical work is related by a person who went to the RFC looking for a job as a stenographer. The informality of the tryout they give makes the thing seem a cinch. They tell you, hurriedly, about capitalizations and the style of doing things. Then they blast out the test, saying that a few mistakes will be forgiven. The person referred to here went away a-thrilling. He knew he had made only two slight errors. Then he called up to see how it was—and they told him he had made 19 mistakes! He is looking around elsewhere . . . Forest Service officials are a little better than worried about the New England hurricane—which everyone else has forgotten. The blown-down trees are mostly on the ground now and tinder for any fire that comes along in the thickly inhabited region . . .

Responsible personnel officials are becoming more and more disturbed over how far the celebrated in-service training program may transgress the private field of learning. It is one of the few corners where a genuine respect for private enterprise is being shown. Mostly it is being viewed from the practical business viewpoint. The officials are aware that most anything is being taught privately; certainly such topics as bookkeeping, stenography and the like are available at low cost here in town. There would be no reason for the Government to provide at its own expense something already available at nominal cost, it is thought. . . . The much sung of Agriculture Department Chorus (famed for its "Nightmare After the Opera") gives its spring concert at 8:30 p. m., Saturday, in the Agriculture Auditorium. The chorus then will feature its president, John M. Wilson, barytone, Prof. Robert Frederick Freund will direct and Victor Neal and Myrtle Alcorn will accompany the chorus. There will be no admission charge. . . . Recent-comers to the ICC include: Jack H. MacElhose, Paul L. Ambelang, Joseph A. Reale, John T. Lynch, Leonard L. Afsanick—Administration; Christian R. Madsen—Locomotive Inspection; Theodore M. Daugherty, William T. Orr, Alice L. B. Taylor, Anita W. Bosley, Stephen Stripsky, Mary I. McGonigle, Nellie A. Buck, Rita M. Burridge, Paul B. Brownlow, Bertha B. Davis, Betty M. Shively, Hyman B. Goldstein, Lucille V. Hollenbeck, Gertrude C. Swalinkavich, Edith L. Smith, Eva M. Marquart, Virginia MacDougall, Earl C. Parrish, jr., Ruth S. Bob Burns Says—

How would you like to be playin' around with what you thought was a phoney $10,000 bill you'd picked up in the street, an' offer it to a storekeeper, as a joke, to pay for a tire, only to find it's the real thing? That's jes' what happened to a Newark man, who only makes $25 a week. An' when the storekeeper recovered from his faintin' spell, he rushed to his bank with his $10,000 gold Treasury certificate, which the Government promptly claimed, since it had gotten lost in a Treasury fire three years ago.

Reminds me of the time I was a kid, havin' a snowball fight. I picked up a handful of snow an' started packin' it, an' there in my hand was a wad of green paper! I thought, at first, it was a tobacco wrapper an' I was jes' about to pack it in the snowball an' let her flicker, when I saw what it really was—a ten dollar bill! . . . They say life is the only teacher an' I guess there's plenty of truth to that. Right then an' there is where I learned not to throw money away!

Danny Discovers More Trouble

There's use for trouble, although we
Its purpose cannot always see.
—Danny Meadow Mouse.

Danny Meadow Mouse had had a miraculous escape from Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy and had safely reached home.

"Reddy and Mrs. Reddy are back on the Green Meadows," he told Nanny Meadow Mouse.

"Too bad. Too bad. But I'm not surprised. I expected it," squeaked Nanny.

"That means that we will have to be everlastingly watching out for trouble," complained Danny.

"That's nothing new. Haven't we all our lives had to be everlastingly watching for trouble?" squeaked Nanny.

"Yes" agreed Danny, "but sometimes we have to watch out more than others. While those Foxes were away and the snow lasted we didn't have much to worry about. It wouldn't be so bad now if Reddy and Mrs. Reddy had not come back. Goodness knows we have enough enemies to keep our eyes open for, without having them around."

Danny poked his funny little head out from under the grass and looked up. It was a matter of habit, a very useful habit for a Meadow Mouse. It had saved his life more than once. Now he drew back. He did it hastily, Nanny noticed it.

"More trouble," squeaked Danny.

Nanny cautiously poked her head out far enough to look up and hastily drew back beneath the sheltering grass.

"More trouble is right," she agreed.

"That's another I hoped wouldn't come back," squeaked Danny.

"We better get out of sight for he was headed this way," said Nanny, leading the way into a dark little passage that led to a snug nest a little way under ground.

It was just as well that Danny followed her for hardly was he out of sight when Harrier the Marsh Hawk came right over where they had been and he was flying low just a little above the ground. When they had seen him, he had been higher. Now he was down low and this meant just one thing—that he was hunting. Yes, sir, Harrier the Marsh Hawk was hunting, and Mice were what he had in mind as he hunted.

"Probably Mrs. Harrier is here too," said Danny when at last they ventured out again and found that the big Hawk was nowhere to be seen.

"Of course," agreed Nanny Meadow Mouse. "I've noticed that when I see one the other isn't likely tobe far away. I don't like them. I never know where to look for them. Other Hawks usually sit up in trees. Then we know where to look for them. I don't know as I ever saw Harrier or Mrs. Harrier in a tree."

"I saw Harrier start from a tree once," squeaked Danny, "but that is the only time I ever have seen him anywhere but in the air or on the ground. If he would fly high like Redtail and some of the other members of the Hawk family I wouldn't mind quite so much. They can be seen, but Harrier flies so low that he is right onto us before we can see him.

"I hope he and Mrs. Harrier are not planning to stay here this summer," said Nanny. "Perhaps they will go on."

"If they don't it will be a hard summer for us," replied Danny.

"And a worse one for the children, poor dears," addad Nanny. "It is bad enough for us, but we do know what to look out for. If we are caught it will be because we are careless. But with the children it is altogether different. A lot of young Mice are caught before they have a chance to learn who their enemies are. Let us hope that the Harriers will move on."

"If they don't we and all the other Mice on the Green Meadows will be in for a hard summer. Yes, sir, we will so," declared Danny.

Roosevelt Asks Billion Boost for FHA

Intervenes in Dispute Between Two Home Financing Agencies

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt has intervened, it was learned yesterday, in a dispute between two Governmental agencies dealing with home financing.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, disclosed the Chief Executive had suggested the amount of mortgage insurance which the Federal Housing Administration could write be increased by $1,000,000,000.

Legislation Approved

This disclosure was made soon after a Senate banking sub-committee had approved legislation to carry out the suggestion.

Previously, FHA officials had asked that their present insurance limit of $3,000,000,000 be doubled, and officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank system, which operates chiefly through building and loan groups, had opposed the request.

Bankhead, chairman of the Senate sub-committee which heard the pleas of both agencies, said the President had written Stewart McDonald, the FHA administrator, suggesting the $1,000,000,000 increase, subject to Presidential order.

The Presidential letter also took cognizance, it was said, of the complaint of officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank system against FHA insurance of mortgages on existing construction.

Home Bank Complained

The home bank officials complained that financial institutions working with the FHA were refinancing existing mortgages and so competing with other private lending facilities. They suggested that FHA insurance be limited to mortgages for new construction or homes involved in new building transactions.

President Roosevelt agreed that FHA should retire eventually from the field of refinancing existing mortgages, but he said such a move might retard home construction in the next few years. He also praised the FHA on the ground it had reduced home mortgage interest rates.

Bankhead said the Senate sub-committee had decided to limit future FHA insurance of mortgages on old homes or existing construction to 35 per cent of its total new insurance.

Although the Senate sub-committee voted to increase the insurance limit only one-third as much as FHA asked, the Senator said this could not "be regarded exactly as a compromise."

Chairman Wagner (Democrat), New York, of the full Banking Committee, said FHA insurance of small homes costing $6,000 and less also would be extended. This power, due to expire July 1, involves insurance of mortgages up to 90 per cent of the cost of the home.

Three Authorial Abbes Visit Capitol, Find Nothing in Congress to Write About

On Way to Europe Despite War Threat; Plan Book on Ranch

The Abbe kids—Patience, Richard and Johnny—were in Washington yesterday, but Congress can rest easy. They were not looking for book material.

"There's nothing here to write about," asserted Patience, oldest of the writing trio that reached fame with "Around the World in Eleven Years," then took off Hollywood in "Of All Places!" and next will write about their ranch in Colorado.

"Congressmen don't interest me," young Patience insisted. "We are on our way to Europe."

"Yes," the Abbes' mamma agreed, "we've walked out on father again and are going to visit all the places the children knew five years ago."

Despite their lack of interest in lawmaking, however, the Abbes spent most of the day on Capitol Hill, calling first at the office of Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, to see Miss Reba Doughton, one of their "favorite people," and then on the Senators from their adopted State of Colorado.

Time and its ravages, alas, have hit the Abbe children! In the three years since she was 11, Patience has lost her braids, shot up a foot in height and acquired a permanent. Richard and Johnny, now 13 and 11, have changed just as radically.

The adolescence that took away some of their surface sparkle, however, has not robbed them of their wide-awake interest in what they hope to find in Europe—where all three were born and spent most of their first 11 years.

"Indeed we are not war scared," Richard declared yesterday. "We know where we're going."

"We'll probably be in the British Isles for three months," Mrs. Abbe said. "We'll map our schedule from there. When the next book will get written we don't know, but it will be about the ranch."
